At age twenty Deborah Hunter is discovering that approaching spinsterhood isn't the horrible prospect her mother has led her to believe. She wants more in life than just marriage and babies. But when the new astronomer in their small town of Pine Ridge suddenly becomes the guardian to his nine-month-old nephew, Deborah is called on to provide assistance. As she reluctantly accepts, little does she know she's about to start the adventure of her life by becoming part of a ready-made family. Helping his boss find the perfect location to build his revolutionary new observatory isn't as easy as Jacob Bryers, a young astronomer, thought it would be. Not only are some of the residents of Pine Ridge against the idea, but he's suddenly been thrust into fatherhood and knows very little about taking care of a baby. Even worse, his faith has grown cold. When Deborah Hunter steps in at just the right moment, she offers more than her help. She offers hope. But there's a new problem. While fighting feelings of attraction for each other, the baby's wealthy grandparents show up on Jacob's doorstep and want to take the baby back into their possession. A marriage of convenience seems the best solution. Can something that started out so simple turn into more? Jacob and Deborah will need a Christmas miracle or two to heal their hearts and help them forge a new love. Let your heart be touched by the magic of Christmas as you read this Christian romance by new historical Western romance author Julia Ridgmont.

Match-Made Christmas Daria White, 2019-07-06

From the outside, Adrienne has everything any woman could want. However, she knows what real happiness is, and it isn't having a good job and a condominium. Traveling home to her small Texas town for a friend's wedding, Adrienne is hit from all sides with the happiness she hasn't found for herself: her long-married parents, her joyful sister and brother-in-law, and their two children, and her childhood friends. They all think she has it all, all except one. Trace has been something of a nemesis since grade school. Always ready with a quip and happy to squabble over even the smallest thing, Adrienne dreaded seeing him when she came back for the wedding. So why does it seem like Trace is the only one who really knows her, who sees her for who she is? Losing his parents to a plane crash and his uncle to cancer, Trace is not too keen on losing anyone else close to him. If only she didn't skip town after graduation. He didn't get a chance to tell her how he felt. There was a reason behind all his teasing. He loved their banter. It meant spending time with her. He could hear her voice. Now she's back, but her leaving is inevitable. He'd have to risk his heart by asking her to stay. He can't take another loss. Working to save their friend's wedding brings Adrienne and Trace together like never before. The clock is ticking, and it's the worst blizzard Lakeshore, Texas, has seen in years. Will these two match up their friends, or end up matching themselves?
