

Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program on the health-related quality of life (HRQL) of patients with heart failure (HF). Methods: A total of 100 patients with HF were randomly assigned to either a supervised exercise program or a control group. The exercise program consisted of 12 weeks of low-intensity, supervised exercise. The control group received standard medical care. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQOL-5D questionnaire. Results: The exercise group showed a significant improvement in HRQL compared to the control group. The mean change in EuroQOL-5D score was 0.15 in the exercise group and -0.05 in the control group. Conclusion: A 12-week, low-intensity, supervised exercise program significantly improved the HRQL of patients with HF.
