Health Psychology Annabel Broome, 2013-11-11 ANNABEL K BROOME The importance of psychological processes in the experience of health and sickness is being increasingly recognized There is mounting evidence for the role of personal behaviour in current trends of morbidity and mortality which is reflected in rapid and significant developments in psychological research Patterns of illness and death have changed in recent years with concurrent changes in demands on health services the skills of carers and the adjustments of the sick person It is within this changing scene that clinical and health psychologists are becoming increasingly involved in applied research into the prevention or alleviation of current health problems These changes are also influencing the training of health professionals with behavioural sciences now forming a substantial component of basic curricula in medical schools and other areas of professional training This book has arisen from this changing clinical scene and the need to convey useful psychological principles to care givers Part One concentrates on the general psychological processes that have relevance in many health settings in the prevention alleviation and management of illness as well as current practices in health care delivery As these developments have been patchy Part Two focuses on selected specialties that have received attention This book is not a comprehensive review of work done in all medical specialties although the structure has been chosen to reflect

Apocalypse Cyril Orji,2025-04-30 Racism evolves Black theology must be adaptable For this reason Black Theology and the Menace of Racial Apocalypse argues that racism must take centre stage in Black theology because racism is an existential dread that inevitably confronts the Black person in their existential situation This book unfolds in two interwoven steps First it delves into the complex history of Black theology examining its development across its first second and third waves This critical study exposts the discomfiting idea that something is missing and that this something makes Black theology seem a little deficient as noted in the pioneering works of James Baldwin and other contemporary thinkers challenging the hesitation to engage with ideas outside Black experience The second step draws from multidisciplinary sources including brain research on cognitive bias and psychological works on implicit bias and microaggressions Effectively utilizing the methodological work of Bernard Lonergan the book argues that incorporating white sources can enhance Black theology s articulation against racism In doing so the book demonstrates how this interpretative mechanism can help overcome societal ideological differences as well as help meaningfully address the ever evolving problem of racism for Christian theology

Confronting Racism Robert T. Carter,Thomas D. Scheuermann,2019-11-05 This book proposes a comprehensive approach to confronting racism through a foundational framework as well as practical strategies to correct and reverse the course of the past and catalyze the stalled efforts of the present It will do so by focusing on those specific aspects of law and legal theory that intersect with psychological research and practice In Part I the historical and current underpinnings of racial injustice and the obstacles to combating racism are introduced Part II examines the documented psychological and emotional effects of racism including race based traumatic stress In Part III the authors analyze the application of forensic mental health assessment in addressing race related experiences and present a legal and policy framework for reforming institutional and organizational policies Finally in part IV the authors advocate for a close collaborative approach among legal and mental health professionals and their clients to seek redress for racial discrimination Confronting Racism provides a framework for legal mental health and other related social science professionals and leaders to acknowledge and act on the harmful aspects of our societal systems ICRMH 2019 Rena Latifa,Solicha Solicha,Ilmi Amalia,Desi Yustari ,Yusuf
