Guilford Technical Community College 1958 2008 Creating Entrepreneurial Partnerships For Workforce Preparedness:

Guilford Technical Community College, 1958-2008 Lee Kinard, 2008 An insightful philosopher notes that one of the most rewarding experiences available to human beings is the opportunity to participate in creating a productive enterprise before all the fundamental parameters of the project have been established tested and studied to death so that anybody can replicate the process This was the challenge GTCC founders pursued in 1958 when as representatives of government business and education they partnered to compile the study that launched GTCC s embryonic forerunner the Guilford Industrial Education Center This history traces the progenitor s venture to establish a basic training center through a meticulous recounting of trials tribulations and intense and acrimonious debates It enables the reader to observe how boards of diverse and politically appointed individuals partnered to cope with the capricious industrial transition that roiled the Piedmont Triad during the second half of the 20th century and haunted the state into the millennium It further represents the most comprehensive effort that has been mounted in decades to dispel the widespread stereotypical often dismissive attitude that tends to relegate North Carolina s community colleges to second rate educational status even though the system accepts more than 800 thousand students a year Rising to the Challenge John E. Roueche, Suanne D. Roueche, 2000 Presents measures taken at Guilford Technical Community College to ensure student and institutional success in the face of economic accountability and completion challenges GTCC s experience serves as a model for any community college facing the same challenges Provided by publisher
