

The background of the entire image is a vibrant winter night scene. At the top, a large, bright yellow full moon hangs in a deep blue sky filled with soft, white clouds. Numerous small white dots represent falling snow. Below the sky, a dense forest of dark green evergreen trees is visible, their branches dusted with snow. In the center of the lower half, a two-story cabin with a grey roof and warm yellow lights glowing from its windows and doors sits in a snowy field. To the right of the cabin, a small figure of a person in a red coat and hat stands in the snow. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and cozy.

A Legend of Montrose, Complete Walter Scott,2016-01-27 I

INTRODUCTION TO A LEGEND OF MONTROSE The Legend of Montrose was written chiefly with a view to place before the reader the melancholy fate of John Lord Kilpont eldest son of William Earl of Airth and Menteith and the singular circumstances attending the birth and history of James Stewart of Ardvairlich by whose hand the unfortunate nobleman fell Our subject leads us to talk of deadly feuds and we must begin with one still more ancient than that to which our story relates During the reign of James IV a great feud between the powerful families of Drummond and Murray divided Perthshire The former being the most numerous and powerful cooped up eight score of the Murrays in the kirk of Monivaird and set fire to it The wives and the children of the ill fated men who had also found shelter in the church perished by the same conflagration One man named David Murray escaped by the humanity of one of the Drummonds who received him in his arms as he leaped from amongst the flames As King James IV ruled with more activity than most of his predecessors this cruel deed was severely revenged and several of the perpetrators were beheaded at Stirling In consequence of the prosecution against his clan the Drummond by whose assistance David Murray had escaped fled to Ireland until by means of the person whose life he had saved he was permitted to return to Scotland where he and his descendants were distinguished by the name of Drummond Eirnich or Ernoch that is Drummond of Ireland and the same title was bestowed on their estate The Drummond Ernoch of James the Sixth's time was a king's forester in the forest of Glenartney and chanced to be employed there in search of venison about the year 1588 or early in 1589 This forest was adjacent to the chief haunts of the MacGregors or a particular race of them known by the title of MacEagh or Children of the Mist They considered the forester's hunting in their vicinity as an aggression or perhaps they had him at feud for the apprehension or slaughter of some of their own name or for some similar reason This tribe of MacGregors were outlawed and persecuted as the reader may see in the Introduction to ROB ROY and every man's hand being against them their hand was of course directed against every man In short they surprised and slew Drummond Ernoch cut off his head and carried it with them wrapt in the corner of one of their plaids
