Framing Education Lars Wallner, 2019-01-22 Interest in comics as Swedish school material has risen in the last few years and the publication of comics for children and adolescents has also increased Meanwhile although research around new literacies has taken an interest in combinations of image and text there is still little research on comics as a literacy material especially as part of school practices With comics rise in popularity and their quality as examples of new literacies this points to the relevance of exploring how meaning making with comics is done in schools The purpose of this study is to contribute knowledge on how locally situated literacy practices are done practices in which pupils and teachers make meaning with comics The study combines literacy comics and discursive psychology to investigate aspects of literacy not as individual inner workings but as part of participants social constructions in line with New Literacy Studies With this perspective it is possible to investigate literary concepts such as narrative and participants construction of story elements through the way in which these aspects are utilized by participants to construct social action what participants do with their utterances To study this video recordings have been made in one primary and one secondary school in two different Swedish cities The results of the study show constructions of a comics literacy where participants engage with both visual and textual aspects of the material and negotiate focalization of narrative perspective and construction of narrative structure as well as narrative devices such as speech and thought bubbles Furthermore meaning making of comics literacy also includes the construction of discourses around comics as a specific type of story telling either for material or literary reasons The thesis discusses how participants construct classroom literature and provides insight into how interaction around comics enables participants to construct and negotiate discourses around what comics literacy is and what it enables as well as how to talk about create and read comics surroundings is taught and practiced during training The analysis demonstrates the intractability of instructions and the prospective retrospective character of members procedures for sensemaking as proposed by Garfinkel 1967 Study II shows how the blind spot check essentially a component of the mirror routine is introduced and later practiced during driving lessons Results revealed how instructions are not only sensitive to changes in the surrounding but also to the trainee s developing levels of competence Study III investigates participants work of establishing joint vision when deciding on an action point for an upcoming maneuver It shows how seeing as a social phenomenon is an achievement that may require interactional work and coordination of embodied sensorial practices The participants orientation to the trainee drivers progression can be seen in different ways of orienting to learning as shared interactional history as mutual orientation displayed through explicitly oriented talk and as changing participation in an ongoing activity Becoming a member driver in the community of road users involves a perceptual restructuring of the world as perceived through one s senses Nishizaka 2006 Sensoriality may thus be seen as crucial to processes of learning In order to develop necessary skills for looking and seeing in traffic trainee drivers should be given ample opportunity to practice those skills in the setting where the instructed practice will actually be produced
