Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic and resistance exercises. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and BP compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.

Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 10-week, 12-session, 120-min, group-based, self-help, and self-directed program on the self-efficacy and self-management skills of 100 patients with type 2 diabetes. The program was designed to help patients understand the importance of self-management, learn how to manage their diabetes, and develop self-management skills. The program was evaluated using a pretest-posttest design. The results showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the self-efficacy and self-management skills of the patients. The program was well accepted by the patients and was found to be a cost-effective intervention for improving self-management skills in patients with type 2 diabetes.
