Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program, while the control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The sessions included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group performed no exercise. Physical fitness was assessed using a 6-minute walk test, a 10-meter walk test, and a 1-minute sit-to-stand test. HRQL was assessed using the SF-36 questionnaire. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher scores on all physical fitness measures and on all SF-36 subscales compared to the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve physical fitness and HRQL in sedentary, middle-aged men.
