

Chapter 11 HEAT EXCHANGERS

Types of Heat Exchangers

11-1C Heat exchangers are classified according to the flow type: parallel flow, counter flow, crossflow, or shell-and-tube. In parallel flow, both hot and cold fluids enter the heat exchanger at the same end and exit at the other. In counter flow, the hot and cold fluids enter the heat exchanger at opposite ends and flow in opposite directions. In cross flow, the hot and cold fluids flow across each other in different directions.

11-2C In terms of construction type, heat exchangers are classified as compact, shell and tube, and regenerative heat exchangers. Compact heat exchangers are typically designed to obtain large heat transfer surface per unit volume. The major compact, cross-flow compact heat exchangers are designed by automotive, chemical, and other firms, an example of them is the water-to-water heat exchanger. Shell-and-tube heat exchangers consist of large number of tubes (passages for fluid) which are surrounded by shell. Regenerative heat exchangers transfer the alternate passages of the hot and cold fluid in series through the same flow area. In compact heat exchangers, the heat fluids usually undergo perpendicular to each other.

11-3C A heat exchanger is classified as having compact if $BS > 700 \text{ m}^2/\text{m}^3$ or $1000 \text{ ft}^2/\text{ft}^3$ where B is the ratio of the heat transfer surface area to the volume, which is called the area density. The area density for double-pipe heat exchangers varies from 10 to 1000 m^2/m^3 . The difference of more than 1000 m^2/m^3 is a compact heat exchanger.

11-4C In counter flow heat exchangers, the hot and the cold fluids move in opposite directions to each other. In parallel flow heat exchangers, the hot and cold fluids move in the same direction. In cross flow heat exchangers, the hot fluid enters the heat exchanger and passes the cold fluid in a perpendicular direction. In a cross flow heat exchanger, the cold fluid enters the heat exchanger and passes the hot fluid in a perpendicular direction. In a cross flow heat exchanger, the hot fluid enters the heat exchanger and passes the cold fluid in a perpendicular direction. In a cross flow heat exchanger, the cold fluid enters the heat exchanger and passes the hot fluid in a perpendicular direction.

11-5C In the shell-and-tube exchangers, both the hot and cold fluids are contained in the shell and tube. The hot fluid enters the shell and tube at the top and exits at the bottom. The cold fluid enters the shell and tube at the bottom and exits at the top. The hot fluid enters the shell and tube at the top and exits at the bottom. The cold fluid enters the shell and tube at the bottom and exits at the top.

11-6C Using the data provided in the shell-and-tube heat exchanger, the heat transfer surface area, the heat transfer rate, and the heat transfer coefficient are determined. The heat transfer rate is determined by the heat transfer coefficient and the heat transfer surface area.

11-7C Using the data provided in the shell-and-tube heat exchanger, the heat transfer rate, the heat transfer coefficient, and the heat transfer surface area are determined. The heat transfer rate is determined by the heat transfer coefficient and the heat transfer surface area.
