Reconstructing Urban Regime Theory Mickey Lauria, 1997 Providing a robust conceptual framework urban regime theory has despite its cited shortcomings gained a dominant position in the literature on local politics in addition to its recent use in contexts outside the United States and in comparative cross national research Reconstructing Urban Regime Theory presents a challenging argument for the need to reconceptualize urban regime s middle level abstractions by interpreting it through the higher level abstractions of regulationist theory The contributors propose stronger conceptual linkages between local agents and institutions regime transformation and the restructuring of urban space The blend of empirical and case study provides an excellent mix of theory and practice

Constructing a Sense of Place Haim Yacobi, 2017-05-15 While it is widely recognized that architects and their architecture play a key role in constructing a sense of place the inherent nexus between an architectural ideology and the production of national space and place has so far been neglected Focusing on the Zionist ideology this book brings together practising architects and academics to critically examine the role of architects architecture and spatial practices as mediators between national ideology and the politicization of space The book first of all sets out the wider context of theoretical debates concerning the role of architecture in the process of constructing a sense of place then divides into six main sections The book not only provides an innovative new perspective on how the Israeli state had developed but also sheds light on how architecture shapes national identity in any post colonial and settler state Administration, 1993

Constructing the Segregated City Kevin Fox Gotham, 1997 The purpose of this dissertation is to identify key actors important decisions and social processes that have created contemporary patterns of poverty and racial residential segregation in the Kansas City metropolitan area In recent years the Kansas City metropolitan area has been identified by scholars as one of the nation's hypersegregated metropolitan areas due to the high degree of segregation in housing patterns on a range of indices Using a racial political economy perspective and the urban case study method I examine how the production distribution and consumption of housing has been instrumental in creating and reinforcing racial residential segregation and uneven development I situate the historical origins development and social and spatial consequences of racial residential segregation in large scale processes of urban change and development including the shift from a compact city pre 1880 to a fragmented city 1880 World War II and the transition to a multicentered metropolis World War II to the present Specifically I examine the long term segregative effects of federal home mortgage programs public housing programs urban redevelopment and renewal programs and large scale highway building in the Kansas City metropolitan area I draw upon archival data census data public documents and housing reports and interviews with local residents and civil rights activists to explore the extent to which these state housing policies and subsidies and the actions of local political and economic actors have contributed the development of segregated housing patterns suburbanization of residences and the concentration of minority poverty
