

(A) FUNDAMENTALS OF ELECTRICAL LOADS

■ CONTINUOUS MONITORING OF ELECTRICAL LOAD

Power and operating requirements of electrical loads are described below to help users select required generator output for the electrical loads they intend to use or to determine proper loads for a given generator output.

The following factors must be considered for the assessment:

1000

The current necessary for an electrical load is self-evident when it is indicated on the machine or in the machine specifications. An appliance can be used if its current is lower than the rated current of the generator and it cannot be used if its current is higher than the rated current.

Table 1

Power consumption is also an accurate index for selection. With this method, only power factor should be taken into consideration since the efficiency of the load has been included in the power consumption figure. The power factor values with loads function:

$$\text{Energy Density} = \frac{\text{Power Consumption (W)}}{\text{Power Factor}}$$

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

	Proper Value
Single phase induction motor	0.45 to 0.6
Three phase induction motor	0.15 to 0.3
Universal and synchronous motor	0.15 to 0.3
Transformer	0.45 to 0.6
Autotransformer and starting capacitor	0.3
AC capacitor	0.45 to 0.6

(E) Knowing input from the power factor and efficiency

The capacity of an electrical load is often indicated by power (W) or horsepower (hp), either of which is power consumption. These indications represent 'output', not 'input' which means actual power consumption of the load. Input can be calculated from output using the following formula:

[illegible]

Power factor will be heavily assumed to be 1.0, although in practice it is not as described above.

Efficiency = 80% (assumed to be 80% on the average, although this value depends on wind)

(specified above) (1)-(2) is the current effect is measured during operation. Most important is the current effect from the start.

This current, although momentary, is usually much larger than the operating current. Called locked rotor current.

Although starting current differs with machine, the required starting current is approximately three times the operating current, when the machine is loaded at the time of starting (e.g., with a submerged pump). It is noted in water. Therefore, for already-loaded machines or spin phase type motors with a large starting current, the current requirement is disadvantageous. Most generators have a capacity to deliver a large intermittent power (which is different from the rated current indicated) to allow a margin for starting such machines. However,

That is the reason why the machines should be started without a load or that no more machines should be started immediately.
