Thieves examines associations of craftsmen in the framework of ancient economics and transaction costs Scholars have long viewed such associations primarily as social or religious groups that provided mutual support proper burial and sociability and spaces where nonelite individuals could seek status supposedly denied them in their contemporary society However the analysis presented here concentrates on how craftsmen merchants and associations interacted with each other and with elite and nonelite constituencies managed economic political social and legal activities represented their concerns to the authorities and acquired and used social capital a new and important view of these economic engines Philip F Venticinque offers a study of associations from a social economic and legal point of view and in the process examines how they helped their members overcome high transaction costs the costs of doing business through the development of social capital He explores associations from the bottom up in order to see how their members create status and reputation outside of an elite framework He thus explores how occupations regarded as thieves in elite ideology create their own systems of honor Honor Among Thieves will be of interest to scholars of the ancient economy of social groups and Roman Egypt in all periods
