Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe's Transition Economies Kym Anderson, Johan Swinnen, 2008-06-05 The vast majority of the world's poorest households depend on farming for their livelihood During the 1960s and 1970s most developing countries imposed pro urban and anti agricultural policies while many high income countries restricted agricultural imports and subsidized their farmers Both sets of policies inhibited economic growth and poverty alleviation in developing countries Although progress has been made over the past two decades to reduce those policy biases many trade and welfare reducing price distortions remain between agriculture and other sectors as well as within the agricultural sector of both rich and poor countries Comprehensive empirical studies of the disarray in world agricultural markets first appeared approximately 20 years ago Since then the OECD has provided estimates each year of market distortions in high income countries but there has been no comparable estimates for the world's developing countries This volume is the first in a series other volumes cover Africa Asia and Latin America that not only fill that void for recent years but extend the estimates in a consistent and comparable way back in time and provide analytical narratives for scores of countries that shed light on the evolving nature and extent of policy interventions over the past half century Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe s Transition Economies provides an overview of the evolution of distortions to agricultural incentives caused by price and trade policies in the economies of Eastern Europe and Central Asia that are transitioning away from central planning The book includes country and subregional studies of the ten transition economies of Central and Eastern Europe that joined the European Union in 2004 or 2007 of seven other large member countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and of Turkey Together these countries comprise over 90 percent of the Europe and Central Asia region s population and GDP Sectoral trade and exchange rate policies in the region have changed greatly since the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991 but price distortions remain The new empirical indicators in these country studies provide a strong evidence based foundation for evaluating policy options in the years ahead

International marketing and trade of quality food products Alessandra Castellini,Erika Pignatti,Roberta Spadoni,Maurizio Canavari,Nicola Cantore,2023-09-04 Due to increased purchasing power of certain consumer segments all over the world and the related growing demand for food specialties for differentiated goods in the international markets agri food trade and marketing is no longer focused on commodities only Key concepts of Marketing International Trade and Quality are taking the forefront in the scientific debate among agricultural economists dealing with agricultural and food products markets The need for scientific knowledge about several aspects of marketing for quality food products is growing The aim of this book is to link these key concepts together and consider connections overlaps contradictions and complementarities between them This book contains peer reviewed articles covering a range of studies on international marketing and trade for quality food products and is edited with the support of the BEAN QUORUM project funded by the European Union s Asia Link Programme The topics covered by the studies range from geographical indications to organic food from fair trade to functional food from knowledge about quality requirements to the impact of the quest for quality The geographical scope of the studies is broad and the perspectives vary including the consumer the producer and the supply chain side The focal interest of the studies also range from competitiveness to policy to potential demand The book is of interest to researchers and practitioners in international food networks of all types We Do Know How James T. Riordan,2014-09-24 An insider with practical experience in development work reveals how understanding market realities can more effectively reduce poverty This book by a practitioner not an academic government official or pundit has been written for practitioners and offers fresh thinking on how to do international development work It combines that thinking with practical guidance in plain English on what to do and perhaps just as importantly what not to do on the ground We Do Know How takes buzzwords commonly used in development circles demand driven results oriented accountability and others and makes them real spelling out a proven approach for expanding business sales and generating jobs for poor people Although government has a role to play in development in the end the actions of businesses drive economic growth and expand people s incomes We Do Know How shows how to build on the incentives that drive businesses and in the process create jobs for the poor Specifically it urges development practitioners to support only those business opportunities for which there is market demand abiding by the maxim produce what you can sell not sell what you produce More than that it cautions practitioners not to become solutions looking for problems but to search creatively for ways to solve the specific problems that stand most in the way of clients meeting buyers requirements We Do Know How challenges much conventional wisdom on how to do development work At the same time and in contrast to other books on development it shows how by maintaining focus and discipline development practitioners can deliver demonstrable increases in jobs for those who need them
