The Maternalists Shaul Bar-Haim,2021-08-06 The Maternalists is a study of the hitherto unexplored significance of utopian visions of the state as a maternal entity in mid twentieth century Britain Demonstrating the affinities between welfarism maternalism and psychoanalysis Shaul Bar Haim suggests a new reading of the British welfare state as a political project After the First World War British doctors social thinkers educators and policy makers became increasingly interested in the contemporary turn being made in psychoanalytic theory toward the role of motherhood in child development These public figures used new notions of the maternal to criticize modern European culture and especially its patriarchal domestic structure This strand of thought was pioneered by figures who were well placed to disseminate their ideas into the higher echelons of British culture education and medical care Figures such as the anthropologists Bronislaw Malinowski and Geza Rheim and the psychiatrist Ian Suttie to mention only a few of the maternalists discussed in the book used psychoanalytic vocabulary to promote both imagined perceptions of motherhood and their idea of the real essence of the maternal In the 1930s as European fascism took hold the maternal became a cultural discourse of both collective social anxieties and fantasies as well as a central concept in many strands of radical and even utopian political thinking During the Second World War and even more so in the postwar era psychoanalysts such as D W Winnicott and Michael Balint responded to the horrors of the war by drawing on interwar maternalistic thought making a demand to maternalize British society and providing postwar Britain with a new political idiom for defining the welfare state as a project of collective care

Psychoanalysis in the Age of Totalitarianism Matt ffytche,Daniel Pick,2016-05-20

Psychoanalysis in the Age of Totalitarianism provides rich new insights into the history of political thought and clinical knowledge. In these chapters internationally renowned historians and cultural theorists discuss landmark debates about the uses and abuses of the talking cure and map the diverse psychologies and therapeutic practices that have featured in and against tyrannical modern regimes. These essays show both how the Freudian movement responded to and was transformed by the rise of fascism and communism the Second World War and the Cold War and how powerful new ideas about aggression destructiveness control obedience and psychological freedom were taken up in the investigation of politics. They identify important intersections between clinical debate political analysis and theories of minds and groups and trace influential ideas about totalitarianism that took root in modern culture after 1918 and still resonate in the twenty first century. At the same time they suggest how the emergent discourses of totalitarian society were permeated by visions of the unconscious. Topics include the psychoanalytic theorizations of anti-Semitism the psychological origins and impact of Nazism the post war struggle to rebuild liberal democracy state funded experiments in mind control in Cold War America coercive re education programmes in Eastern Europe and the role of psychoanalysis in the politics of decolonization. A concluding trio of chapters argues in various ways for the continuing relevance of psychoanalysis and of these mid century debates over the psychology of power submission and freedom in modern mass society. Psychoanalysis in the Age of Totalitarianism will prove compelling for both specialists and readers with a general interest in modern psychology politics culture and society and in psychoanalysis. The material is relevant for academics and post graduate students in the human social and political sciences the clinical professions the historical profession and the humanities more widely.

Mental Hygiene and Psychiatry in Modern Britain J. Feeding, Bonding, and the Formation of Social Relationships Leberecht Funk, Gabriel Scheidecker, Bambi L. Chapin, Wiebke J. Schmidt, Christine El Ouardani, Nandita Chaudhary, 2023-08-17 This Element explores multi faceted linkages between feeding and relationship formation based on ethnographic case studies in Morocco Madagascar Sri Lanka Taiwan and Costa Rica. Research demonstrates that there are many culturally valued ways of feeding children contradicting the idea of a single universally optimal feeding standard. It demonstrates further that in many parts of the world feeding plays a central role in bonding and relationship formation something largely overlooked in current developmental theories. Analysis shows that feeding contributes to relationship formation through what we call proximal transactional and distal dimensions. This Element argues that feeding practices can lead to qualitatively distinct forms of relationships. It has important theoretical and practical implications calling for the expansion of attachment theory to include feeding and body centered caregiving and significant changes to global interventions currently based on responsive feeding.
