Advances and Challenges in Pain Measurement Kenneth Craig, Loren Martin, Kai Karos, 2023-08-18 Lord Kelvin William Thompson To measure is to know If you cannot measure it you cannot improve it Pain has proven elusive to definitive measurement in research and clinical settings While the experience is familiar to virtually everyone it also is recognized as complex and multidimensional Critiques of the field advise that pain is often unrecognized inadequately assessed and underestimated Unidimensional scales relying upon self report are commonly used both clinically and in research settings but they are vulnerable to presentation bias and they fail to capture the complexity of this multidimensional phenomenon In consequence there has been considerable interest and effort devoted to the generation of measures capable to capturing the experience for both research and clinical purposes Both behavioral and physiological approaches have been pursued Verbal behavior is represented by self report scales that vary in dimensionality typically seeking to represent sensory affective and cognitive features of the experience The status of self report scales as the gold standard for pain assessment has been questioned Nonverbal measures seek to capture behavioral activity ranging from facial expression through limb movements and gestures to posture Physiological measures are similarly wide ranging capitalizing on recent developments in brain imaging and novel approaches to autonomic regulation There also are efforts to fuse behavioral and physiological measures as a means of capturing the complexity of pain This series of papers seeks to represent the most recent conceptual and empirical advances in the important and rapidly advancing field of pain assessment and measurement We invite both reviews of the literature and research investigations advancing the field

Transforming Health and Social Education to Include a Greater Focus on Public Health Education in the Curriculum Sharon Brownie, Constance Shumba, Louise Ackers, Georgina A.V. Murphy, 2023-12-14

Now more than ever an increased emphasis is needed on educational changes and innovations to effectively prepare health and social service professionals for 21st century practice. Earlier work of the Lancet Independent Global Commission has been instrumental in validating the need for curricula change to include a focus on social determinants, public health priorities and strategies to sustain healthy communities. The need to further strengthen the public health focus within health and social service education has been fuelled by the COVID 19 pandemic and the growing recognition of specific issues challenging society such as that highlighted within the technical report recently released by the World Health Organization recognizing Parkinson's Disease as a public health issue. Each is an example of the need to prepare a future health and social service workforce well equipped in responding to major public health issues while contributing to global health and human wellbeing. The goal of this Research Topic is to provide additional evidence based contributions to strengthen the public health focus in health and social service education. We aim to commission and publish a broad range of works including original research, case studies, pedagogical innovations, curriculum developments, program evaluations and debate.
