Behavior Therapy with Children Heinz Eulau,Anthony M. Graziano,2017-07-28 The term behavior modification refers to the systematic analysis and change of human behavior and the principal focus is on overt behavior and its relationships to environmental variables Behavior modification can be applied in many settings the nature of which helps to define its subsets Thus applied in clinical settings toward clinical goals it encompasses the subset behavior therapy In Behavior Therapy with Children Volume 2 Anthony M Graziano focuses on behavior therapy specifically the behavioral treatment of children s clinical problems The field of behavior modification encompasses an astonishingly wide and varied spectrum of concepts about and approaches to education clinical problems social programming and rehabilitation efforts A conceptually and technologically rich medium it has been nourished by the psychology laboratory the school and the psychiatric clinic It is an area with diffuse boundaries surrounding a highly active center within which apparently solid landmarks have already been worn away by the dissolving action of corrective self criticism immeasurably aided by the catalysts stirred in by the field s many critics The activity continues the dynamic field boils and the medium enriches itself There appears to be a tendency particularly among new behavior therapists to limit their focus too narrowly to the client s systems of overt behavior In this project psychological therapy begins with a personal interactive social situation in which the generally expected human response of interest sympathy and support is the minimum condition Graziano maintains that these clinical sensitivity skills must be preserved in behavior therapy and enhance its important contribution to advancing the therapeutic endeavor

The Mourning of Angels Patricia S. Taylor Edmisten, 2001-10-15 a compelling story of female initiation St Petersburg Times I read Patricia Edmisten s dramatic and sensuous debut novel The Mourning of Angels in the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attacks Her marvelous evocation of the first days of the Peace Corps provided an escape from the sadness of New York City where I live as well as a much needed perspective on the savagery of that act The Mourning of Angels captures the innocence of 1962 and 1963 before the Kennedy assassination when many of us swept up in the idealism of such a venture joined the Peace Corps and journeyed to countries we'd never heard of and when young women seized the opportunity for a kind of adventure that until then had almost solely been the purview of men Lydia Schaefer Edmisten's 23 year old protagonist from Milwaukee Wisconsin is a tough principled sometimes provocative but always emotionally receptive young woman determined to do her job as a health care worker first in Arequipa Peru and later in the coastal town of Ica In straightforward beautifully descriptive prose subtly impregnated with the political and cultural history of Peru Edmisten charts Lydia Schaefer's journey from innocence she is a Catholic girl still a virgin the product of a protective loving home to a stark tragic maturity Lydia describes her view beyond her barriada in Arequipa Gray and white dominate the landscape No road is paved There are no trees Nothing green No spring flowers interfere with the dreariness Looking up however there is visual relief Misti a 19 150 foot volcano said to be dormant by experts but alive to those who know her tremors rises proudly over The City of my Hope Snow lavishly bleeds down her sides like the white mantle of the Madonna As this image of the Virgins cloak implies Lydia struggles with her strong Catholic beliefs in the face of rampant infant mortality the yearly pregnancies of poor women and the Church's refusal to allow birth control Interestingly she never gives up her Catholicism but rather gradually adapts the religion to her new knowledge and beliefs much as Indians force the Catholic church to incorporate native rituals into the liturgy She breaks her own rule to remain a virgin until marriage With a sensuality that is both innocent and literally rapturous Edmisten writes of Lydia making love with her in country co worker Rafael He is mestizo with a Spanish father and Indian mother They are journeying back to his village beyond Machu Picchu when they stop to swim in a mountain pool and then make love Rafael's kiss is moist and sweet and as he eases on top of me it becomes more familiar more urgent The air is fresh and fragrant a light breeze glances off our warm bodies I look up at blinding white clouds and reach my arms out to them We remain immobile for a few minutes and then slowly rock A condor soars overhead I have read of eagles mating in mid air free falling unaware of the doom below It was like that The doom she senses in her moment of sexual abandon foreshadows of political clashes and violence that will irrevocably change her life and radicalize her world view Edmisten is masterful in portraying the customs politics food suffering playful activities and collective nature of life for the Indians of that region She elegantly weaves in strands of history and political theory Though generous of spirit throughout by the end of her painful story Edmisten has shown how the Church the United States in its fight against communism during that period the cultural innocence of Americans the abusive powers within the country are all at least morally complicit in the continuance of devastating poverty the subjugation of women and the oppression of Indians Reading The Mourning of Angels in a time of national mourning viscerally reminded me that other cultures and nations have suffered
