

TRANSPORTING

To place the backhoe in transport position, operate the swing cylinder until the boom is lowered and then, simultaneously raise the boom, retract the dipper stick, and close the bucket. Completely retract stabilizers.

When transporting the backhoe, the boom locking pins must be removed for transport, and the boom locking pins must be inserted during transport. The boom locking pins prevent any up and down movement of the boom.

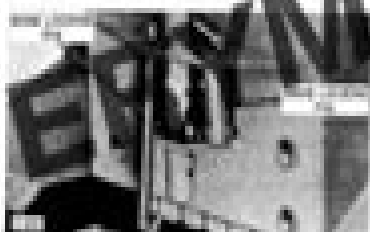

Operation 1

To place seat in transport position, lift straight up two inches and swing to left or right until seat is positioned as shown below. Seat will drop until vertical adjusting gas is located between two position locking pins.

Drive slowly when transporting the backhoe over uneven terrain.

PREPARING BACKHOE FOR OPERATION AFTER TRANSPORTING

To operate backhoe, place backhoe seat in operating position by lifting two inches and rotating until seat is facing backhoe. Remove swing locking pin and boom locking pin(s) placed in storage rack at rear of operator's seat when stored above.

1 Operation

OPERATING PROCEDURES

Before working with the backhoe, drive the seat to a safe open area. Lower the bucket bucket to the ground, remove boom and swing locking pins, lower the backhoe stabilizers, and operate the control levers to lower bucket with their guard and accessories. Note that the speed of the cylinder movement depends on the amount the control levers are moved. Swing the boom around boom to provide controlling the speed of swing.

It is not difficult to become an efficient operator. A control lever operating guide is located behind the main control handles. Study this guide; it will assist you in becoming familiar with the controls.

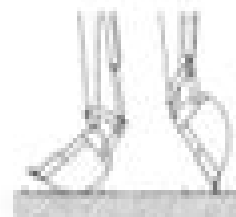

The John Deere Backhoe is designed so both control levers can be operated simultaneously.

When lowering the boom and dipperstick, the boom and dipperstick should be lowered together and in a straight line. Repeat this operation until you are comfortable with the controls. Remember that you are both the boom and dipper stick move. Repeat until you get accurate operation with both controls.

With a small amount of practice, other dual function can be performed, and eventually all four backhoe operations can be performed simultaneously. After several practice maneuvers using the above instructions, you will be ready to dig with your backhoe.

When opening a trench, position the dipper stick to a vertical position, then swing it away from the tractor approximately 30 degrees. The bucket should be positioned to dig 3 to 4 inches of soil off the surface without dragging the head of the bucket. For the correct method in the operating sequence illustrated in the next column. On the descending pass, lower the boom 4 to 5 inches and proceed as before.

Lower the bucket to the digging depth and, using force pressure on the boom, force the bucket into the ground.

Right Foot On Forward Right Foot On Lift

It is important for the backhoe operator to be in the proper position when operating the backhoe. The operator should be able to reach the controls without straining. The operator should be able to see the bucket and the ground being dug.

With the bucket in the ground, simultaneously retract the dipper stick and until the bucket until the bucket is full.

If the bucket stalls, raise the boom slightly and continue to dig until the bucket is full.

Raise the bucket to the top of the trench and dump it on the spill side. With a little practice, raising, swinging, and dumping can be accomplished in one smooth operation.

When loading trucks with topsoil, material, or other material, it is best to operate the backhoe in a smooth operation.

When operating on inclines, swing the spill side to the spill side of the trench. The tractor will be in a more stable position, and backhoeing will be easier.

When operating on level ground, the backhoe-tractor unit can be moved backward quickly by putting it with the bucket against the ground. Before doing this, raise the equipment on the front of the tractor and raise stabilizers off the ground.
