

TRANSPORTING

To place the backhoe in transport position, operate the swing cylinder until the boom is retracted and then, simultaneously raise the boom, retract the dipper stick, and close the bucket. Completely retract stabilizers.

When transporting the backhoe, always use the proper technique for towing, and always use the proper technique for backing up. When backing up, always use the proper technique for backing up. The backhoe should be backed up in a straight line, and the operator should be aware of the backhoe's position at all times.

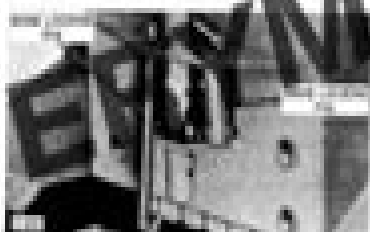

Operation 1

To place seat in transport position, lift straight up two inches and swing to left or right until seat is positioned as shown above. Seat will drop until vertical adjusting gas is located between two position locking pins.

Drive slowly when transporting the backhoe over uneven terrain.

PREPARING BACKHOE FOR OPERATION AFTER TRANSPORTING

To operate backhoe, place backhoe seat in operating position by lifting two inches and rotating until seat is facing backhoe. Remove swing locking pin and boom locking pin and place in storage rack at rear of operator's console as shown above.

Operation 2

OPERATING PROCEDURES

Before working with the backhoe, drive the seat to a safe open area. Lower the bucket to the ground, remove boom and swing locking pins, lower the backhoe stabilizers, and operate the control levers to remove backhoe with their swing and movements. Note that the speed of the cylinder movement depends on the amount the control levers are moved. Swing the boom around slowly to prevent controlling the speed of swing.

It is not difficult to become an efficient operator. A control lever operating guide is located behind the main control handles. Study this guide; it will assist you in becoming familiar with the controls.

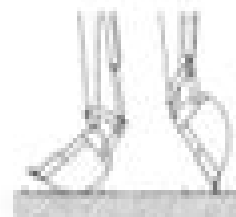

The John Deere Backhoe is designed so both control levers can be operated simultaneously.

When working with the backhoe, the operator should be aware of the backhoe's position at all times. The operator should be aware of the backhoe's position at all times. The operator should be aware of the backhoe's position at all times. The operator should be aware of the backhoe's position at all times.

With a small amount of practice, other dual functions can be performed, and eventually all four backhoe operations can be performed simultaneously. After several practice maneuvers using the above instructions, you will be ready to dig with your backhoe.

When opening a trench, position the dipper stick to a vertical position, then swing it away from the tractor approximately 30 degrees. The bucket should be positioned to dig 3 to 4 inches of soil off the surface without dragging the heel of the bucket. For the correct method in the operating sequence illustrated in the next column. On the descending pass, lower the boom 4 to 5 inches and proceed as before.

Lower the bucket to the digging depth and, using three pressure on the boom, force the bucket into the ground.

Bucket To Be Filled Bucket To Be Dumped

It is important for the backhoe operator to be in the proper position when operating the backhoe. The operator should be in a position that allows them to see the backhoe's position at all times. The operator should be in a position that allows them to see the backhoe's position at all times.

With the bucket in the ground, simultaneously retract the dipper stick and until the bucket until the bucket is full.

If the bucket stalls, raise the boom slightly and continue to dig until the bucket is full.

Raise the bucket to the top of the trench and dump it on the spill side. With a little practice, raising, swinging, and dumping can be accomplished in one smooth operation.

When loading trucks with topsoil, position the bucket so it is being raised to prevent spilling the contents.

When operating on inclines, swing the spill side to the spill side of the trench. The tractor will be in a more stable position, and backfilling will be easier.

When operating on level ground, the backhoe-tractor unit can be moved backward quickly by putting it with the bucket against the ground. Before doing this, raise the equipment on the front of the tractor and raise stabilizers off the ground.
