Information For Innovation Managing Change From An Information Perspective:

Information for Innovation Stuart Macdonald, 1998-04-09 Information is not taken seriously Much is said about the information age the information economy the information society and particularly about information technology but little about information itself If these are important then so is information But information is not as other goods it has some peculiar characteristics It cannot be displayed for sale without giving it away in the process Sold it goes to the buyer but still remains with the seller Buying entails expressing demand in ignorance for buyers who do not know just what it is that they do not know Such characteristics have long been recognised by economists but it is not generally economists who have most to say about the importance of information This privilege is exercised by senior managers who speak passionately about knowledge based learning organizations by politicians and public servants anxious to compensate with policy and programme for the information failure of organization and market and by specialists in telecommunications and information technology bent on adding value to what they treat as just a commodity All are particularly enthusiastic about the innovation which springs from information Information usually requires new information Finding acquiring and mixing this new information with that already in use presents problems not least because complex information transactions are required rather than simple information transfer Solutions can be devised but only by accommodating the characteristics of information This book contrasts the way innovation is normally regarded in a variety of areas from eighteenth century agriculture to high technology from technology transfer to industrial espionage from corporate strategy to patents and independent inventors with how it appears from what is termed an information perspective that is one that puts information first The results are intriguing suggesting that radically different approaches to innovation and organization should be considered Handbook of Technology Management in Public Administration David Greisler, Ronald J. Stupak, 2006-11-15 All organizations whether for profit not for profit or government face issues of information technology management While the concerns involved may differ from organization to organization the principles of good information technology management remain the same Using a compilation of articles on various topics relating to technology manage Intellectual Property and Innovation Management in Small Firms Robert Blackburn, 2007 This text focuses on intellectual property management in small and medium sized enterprises from both a national and international perspective and considers the question in the context of innovation and knowledge management China's Three Decades of Economic Reforms Xiaohui Liu, Wei Zhang, 2009-09-10 China's economy continues to grow rapidly with important consequences for its own society and environment as well as for the wider world economy This book provides much needed insight using the latest research findings into China's successful reform experience and its challenges over three decades Information for Innovation Stuart Macdonald, 2005-07 Innovation usually requires new info Finding acquiring mixing this new info with that already in use presents problems not least because complex info transactions are required rather than simple info transfer Solutions can be devised but only by accommodating the characteristics of info This vol contrasts the way that innovation is normally regarded in a variety of areas from 18th cent agriculture to high technology from technology transfer to industrial espionage from corp strategy to patents independent inventors with how it appears from what is termed an info perspective one that puts info first The results are intriguing suggesting that radically different approaches to innovation organization are worth some consideration
