

Less Is More

The background of the cover is a light beige color. It features a stylized illustration in teal and red. At the top, there are two birds in flight. Below them, a large, leafy tree stands on a hill. To the left of the tree, a red sun with radiating lines is partially obscured by a teal hill. The hills are depicted with teal outlines and horizontal hatching. At the bottom, there are red and teal plants, possibly dandelions or similar wildflowers.

EnviroPOP Mark Meister, Phyllis M. Japp, 2002-09-30 Although much scholarly and critical attention has been paid to the relationship between rhetoric and environmental issues media and environmental issues and politics and environmental issues no book has yet focused on the relationship between popular culture and environmental issues This collection of essays provides a rigorous and multifaceted rhetorical and critical perspective on the ways in which the language and imagery of nature is incorporated strategically into various popular culture texts ranging from greeting cards to advertisements to supermarket tabloids As a distinguished group of scholars reveals our notions about the environment and environmentalism are both reflected in and shaped by our popular culture in fascinating ways never previously examined in an academic context The consumptive vision of nature presented in these texts represents a wholly American view one promoting leisure and comfort and nature as the place to experience them This good life attitude toward the environment often serves to commodify it to render it little more than space in which to pursue conventional notions of the American dream As such the volume represents a bold and striking vision both of popular culture and of popular notions of an environment that can be either protected or just simply consumed
