Walker,2020-02-03 In the years leading up to the Civil War Ohio had more African American settlements than any other state Owing to a common border with several slave states it became a destination for people of color seeking to separate themselves from slavery Despite these communities having populations that sometimes numbered in the hundreds little is known about most of them and by the beginning of the twentieth century nearly all had lost their ethnic identities as the original settlers died off and their descendants moved away Save for scattered cemeteries and an occasional house or church they have all but been erased from Ohio s landscape Father daughter coauthors David Meyers and Elise Meyers Walker piece together the stories of more than forty of these black settlements Stories in Stone: Memorialization, the Creation of History and the Role of Preservation Emily Williams,2020-10-06 In 1866 Alexander Dunlop a free black living in Williamsburg Virginia did three unusual things He had an audience with the President of the United States testified in front of the Joint Congressional Committee on Reconstruction and he purchased a tombstone for his wife Lucy Ann Dunlop Purchases of this sort were rarities among Virginia s free black community and this particular gravestone is made more significant by Dunlop s choice of words his political advocacy and the racialized rhetoric of the period Carved by a pair of Richmond based carvers who like many other Southern monument makers contributed to celebrating and mythologizing the Lost Cause in the wake of the Civil War Lucy Ann s tombstone is a powerful statement of Dunlop s belief in the worth of all men and his hopes for the future Buried in 1925 by the white members of a church congregation and again in the 1960s by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation the tombstone was excavated in 2003 Analysis conservation and long term interpretation were undertaken by the Foundation in partnership with the community of the First Baptist Church a historically black church within which Alexander

Dunlop was a leader. Stories in Stone: Memorialization, the Creation of History, and the Role of Preservation examines the story of the tombstone through a blend of object biography and micro historical approaches and contrasts it with other memory projects like the remembrance of the Civil War dead. Data from a regional survey of nineteenth century cemeteries, historical accounts, literary sources, and the visual arts are woven together to explore the agentive relationships between monuments, their commissioners, their creators, and their viewers, and the ways in which memory is created and contested, and how this impacts the history we learn and preserve.
