Lessons For The Young Economist:

Lessons for the Young Economist Robert P. Murphy, 2010      Lessons for the Young Economist Robert P. Murphy, 2012      Pope Francis and the Caring Society Robert M. Whaples, 2017-09-01 Pope Francis and the Caring Society is a thoughtful and in depth exploration of the Pope's earnest call for a dialogue on building a truly compassionate society. Francis's fervent support for uplifting the poor and protecting the environment has inspired far reaching discussions worldwide. What is the most effective way to fight poverty? Can environmental resources be better protected with property rights? Are the poor better off under a market economy? And what value does a religious perspective offer in addressing moral, political and economic problems? Pope Francis and the Caring Society is an indispensable resource for consideration of these vital questions. Edited by Robert M. Whaples with a foreword by Michael Novak, the book provides an integrated perspective on Francis and the issues he has raised, examining the intersection of religion, politics and economics. Readers will discover important historical and cultural context for considering Francis's views along with non-bureaucratic solutions for environmental preservation, an analysis of Francis's criticism of power and privilege, the case for market based entrepreneurship and private charity as the essential tools for fighting poverty, and an examination of Francis's philosophy of the family. Pope Francis and the Caring Society is essential reading for anyone interested in creating a better, more caring and prosperous world.

Learning Lessons Rashi Fein, 2017-07-28 This is a book about the policy process. It discusses the considerations advisers have in mind as they develop and select policy alternatives, the ways each of us might want to think about making decisions, and the lessons we should remember in order to minimize avoidable errors. In writing about his experiences in government, the classroom and private life, Fein offers insights that apply to people responsible for decisions in many kinds of institutions at all levels of responsibility. His anecdotes and the situations he describes are drawn from over fifty years of experience in the policy arena. They are not intended to represent either a rounded theory about public administration or a comprehensive treatment of important components of political science. Like most people in the policy arena, Fein came to that work from another discipline; in his case, economics. His experience of finding his own way through action and experience rather than through application of theory might appear quaint. But his successes, failures and the lessons he learned illuminate the process and may prove useful, even inspirational. Fein is sensitive to the need to move beyond statistics and to present the real world and the faces of real people behind the data. He believes that an effective adviser should bring knowledge and interests that extend beyond the confines of a single discipline, even one as methodologically powerful as economics. Unless the adviser presents a range of choices that have been developed with contributions from many fields of knowledge, the proposed policies are likely to be far too constrained and at worst unworkable. His perspective articulated in this book is easily summarized: there is more to life and to our nation's welfare
