The Convention on International Trade of Endangered Species Jonathan Liljeblad,2014-01-14 Debates over U S government policy frequently follow a philosophy of devolution in authority from federal government to local government This concept opens the possibility of greater local involvement in national policy implementation and provides international treaties an opportunity to advance global policy by incorporating the efforts of local actors into their implementation framework Much of international policy involves enforcement through international to national linkages forming an implementation chain but devolution offers the potential to extend the implementation chain by providing national to local linkages This book explores the nature of such linkages taking as a case study the Convention on the International Trade in Endangered Species CITES via its domestic analog in the U S the Endangered Species Act ESA The analysis employs both quantitative and qualitative methods including interviews surveys statistical analysis and document review The author concludes that while the framework of CITES enforcement in the U S allows for national to local extension of the CITES implementation chain it also presents challenges that should be addressed by international policymakers who consider devolution as a way of assisting global policy The book includes a Foreword by Scott A Frisch a professor of political science and chair of the department at California State University Channel Islands Frisch notes that in this book Jonathan Liljeblad offers an enlightening and long overdue look at the issue of local implementation of international policy Liljeblad is able to arrive at insightful conclusions as well as concrete recommendations for policymakers wishing to improve coordination and execution of international policies that rely on local governments for their implementation He concludes Liljeblad s recommendations would foster a climate of greater understanding of the connections between international and domestic policy and should be heeded by all levels of government to remove unnecessary roadblocks that can derail implementation A new study in the international protection of animal and plant species presented by Quid Pro Books The Police Patrol Car Robert G.
