Learning to make change Paul Kibwika,2023-08-28 Universities represent the highest level of education yet they are notoriously slow in responding to a rapidly changing world Deeply entrenched elitism and routines a continued emphasis on reproductive learning and the continued dominance of disciplinary thinking have in many instances created bastions of educational conservatism unable to contribute meaningfully to the development of people businesses and communities within a finite global ecosystem This book focuses on an African university s efforts to become more innovative and responsive to community needs and the challenges posed by sustainability A central concept is innovation competence as a pre requisite for transforming learning research and consultancy Making change in society requires innovation competences over and above disciplinary expertise and these competences have to be learnt by both staff and students Kibwika not only shows that it is imperative that African universities re orient their programmes to produce graduates capable of enhancing innovation and social change in the community he also provides a number of solid stepping stones for capacity building and curriculum development that in time will result in an innovative university able to contribute to a world that is more sustainable than the one currently in prospect We Make Change Kristin Layng Szakos, Joe Szakos, 2007

Community organizers work at their jobs because they are passionate because they believe that change is possible and because they enjoy working with people Although it is not an occupation that leads to great wealth community organizers can make a living at it They get salaries pensions and health insurance They raise families They do well by doing good This book explores the world of community organizing through the voices of real people working in the field in small towns and city neighborhoods women and men of different races and economic backgrounds ranging in age from those in their twenties to those in their sixties Fourteen in depth profiles tell the life stories of a cross section of the diverse people who choose the life of an organizer Other chapters focused on issues of organizing are tapestries of experience woven from the 81 interviews the authors conducted Life Reconnected - How Women Can Make Simple and Powerful Change Penny C
