Tracing Early Agriculture in the Highlands of New Guinea Tim Denham, 2018-06-28 In this book historical narratives chart how people created forms of agriculture in the highlands of New Guinea and how these practices were transformed through time The intention is twofold to clearly establish New Guinea as a region of early agricultural development and plant domestication and to develop a contingent practice based interpretation of early agriculture that has broader application to other regions of the world The multi disciplinary record from the highlands has the potential to challenge and change long held assumptions regarding early agriculture globally which are usually based on domestication Early agriculture in the highlands is charted by an exposition of the practices of plant exploitation and cultivation Practices are ontologically prior because they ultimately produce the phenotypic and genotypic changes in plant species characterised as domestication as well as the social and environmental transformations associated with agriculture They are also methodologically prior because they emplace plants in specific historico geographic contexts
