Objectives: Students will be able to identify the role of the United Nations in the protection of human rights.

Objectives: Students will be able to identify the role of the United Nations in the protection of human rights.

In 1948, the United Nations adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. This document is the foundation of the United Nations' commitment to the protection of human rights. It is the first time that the United Nations has ever adopted a document that is binding on all member states.

Since 1948, the United Nations has adopted a number of other documents that are binding on all member states. These documents include the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women. These documents are the foundation of the United Nations' commitment to the protection of human rights.

By the year 2000, the United Nations had adopted a number of other documents that are binding on all member states. These documents include the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, and the Convention on the Rights of the Child. These documents are the foundation of the United Nations' commitment to the protection of human rights.

1. Identify the role of the United Nations in the protection of human rights.
