Raphael Hythloday to whom More is introduced in Antwerp and it also explores the subject of how best to counsel a prince a popular topic at the time The first discussions with Raphael allow him to discuss some of the modern ills affecting Europe such as the tendency of kings to start wars and the subsequent bleeding away of money on fruitless endeavours He also criticises the use of execution to punish theft saying that thieves might as well murder whom they rob to remove witnesses if the punishment is going to be the same More tries to convince Raphael that he could find a good job in a royal court advising monarchs but Raphael says that his views are too radical and would not be listened to Raphael sees himself in the tradition of Plato he knows that for good governance kings must act philosophically However he points out that Plato doubtless did well foresee unless kings themselves would apply their minds to the study of philosophy that else they would never thoroughly allow the council of philosophers being themselves before even from their tender age infected and corrupt with perverse and evil opinions More seems to contemplate the duty of philosophers to work around and in real situations and for the sake of political expediency work within flawed systems to make them better rather than hoping to start again from first principles
