The Changing Face of Management in China Chris Rowley, Fang Lee Cooke, 2014-03-18 The main aim of this title is to examine a range of areas of Chinese management in the context of the local political economic and social traditions and the global economy

Clash of Empires Ho-fung Hung, 2022-05-05 Many believe the recent deterioration in US China relations represents a New Cold War rooted in ideological differences However such differences did not prevent the two countries from pursuing economic integration and geopolitical cooperation in the 1990s and 2000s Ho fung Hung argues that what underlies the change in US China relations is the changing relationship between US China corporations Following China s slowdown after 2010 state backed Chinese corporations turned increasingly aggressive when they expanded in both domestic and global markets This was at the expense of US corporations who then halted their previously intense lobbying for China in Washington Simultaneously China s export of industrial overcapacity has provoked geopolitical competition with the United States The resulting dynamic Hung argues resembles interimperial rivalry among the great powers at the turn of the twentieth century

China's Regulatory State Roselyn Hsueh Romano, 2011-10-15 Today s China is governed by a new economic model that marks a radical break from the Mao and Deng eras it departs fundamentally from both the East Asian developmental state and its own Communist past It has not however adopted a liberal economic model China has retained elements of statist control even though it has liberalized foreign direct investment more than any other developing country in recent years This mode of global economic integration reveals much about China s state capacity and development strategy which is based on retaining government control over critical sectors while meeting commitments made to the World Trade Organization In China s Regulatory State Roselyn Hsueh demonstrates that China only appears to be a more liberal state even as it introduces competition and devolves economic decisionmaking the state has selectively imposed new regulations at the sectoral level asserting and even tightening control over industry and market development to achieve state goals By investigating in depth how China implemented its economic policies between 1978 and 2010 Hsueh gives the most complete picture yet of China s regulatory state particularly as it has shaped the telecommunications and textiles industries Hsueh contends that a logic of strategic value explains how the state with its different levels of authority and maze of bureaucracies interacts with new economic stakeholders to enhance its control in certain economic sectors while relinquishing control in others Sectoral characteristics determine policy specifics although the organization of institutions and boom bust cycles influence how the state reformulates old rules and creates new ones to maximize benefits and minimize costs after an initial phase of liberalization This pathbreaking analysis of state goals government business relations and methods of governance across industries in China also considers Japan s South Korea s and Taiwan s manifestly different approaches to globalization

Foreign entry commitment as a human choice Maud Oortwijn, 2012-06-01 Firms increase commitment to foreign markets with growing experience in international business The basic premise of the internationalization process theory is that knowledge is acquired through experience abroad Maud Oortwijn's research work finds how this learning process within the firm is reflected in the managerial host country assessment Managers perceive the new host country more optimistic with increasing experience in international business International Business scholars often report on macro economic factors and post entrance business performance This research studies 25 firms on 54 foreign entry commitment choices while in the process of decision making for foreign entrance This also allows for unique insight in the Go No Go decision Some firms decide to cancel or postpone plans while others continue with different entry modes

The China Choice Hugh White, 2013-07-04 China is rising But how should the West and the United States in particular respond This could be the key geopolitical question of the twenty first century according to strategic expert Hugh White with huge implications for the future security and prosperity of the West as a whole The China Choice confronts this fundamental question considering the options for the Asian century ahead As China's economy grows to become the world's largest the US has three choices it can compete share power or concede leadership in Asia The choice is momentous as significant for the future as any the US has ever faced China is already more formidable than any country the US has faced before and if America does not want to find itself facing China as an enemy it must accept it as an equal partner Weighing the huge difficulties of accepting China as an equal with the immense cost and risks of making it an enemy in the end the choice is simple even if it is not easy The US simply must share power with China in Asia The alternative is too terrible to contemplate

School Choice in China Wu Xiaoxin, 2013-10-15 School Choice in China explores the major characteristics of schooling options in China highlighting how largely middle class parents exploit their cultural economic and social capital for their children's admission into choice schools It highlights how payments such as choice fees donations prize winning certificates and awards as well as the use of guanxi result in Chinese school choice as a parent driven bottom up movement The author also explores how schools and local governments cash in on the school choice fever in order to obtain significant economic returns leading to policies that accommodate the needs of mostly middle class families He argues that although this system seems to create winners among the parties involved it exacerbates the educational inequality that already exists in Chinese society Chapters include Positional competition for cultural capital Exploitation of social capital Economics of school choice Class reproduction through parental choice This book is not simply a detailed analysis of Chinese school choice practices but also a study of the competitive middle class search for advantage for their children As such it will be beneficial to undergraduates postgraduates education professionals policy makers and anyone with an interest in education sociology social policy and the rise and future of China China's Middle Class Li Youmei, 2021-05-12 This book is a collection of empirical studies on China's middle class from top ranking Chinese sociologists discussing this newly identified social stratum with regard to the basic concept and scope of the group its functions formation identity consumption behavior patterns and value system As the first study of its kind the analysis of most chapters is based on a rich body of empirical data gathered from rigorous large scale surveys designed specifically for the Chinese middle class across megacities including Beijing Shanghai and Guangzhou The book traces the complex and dynamic formation process of China s middle class from different perspectives while dealing with issues of social concern such as rigid social stratification The findings shed light on the underlying logic of structural change in Chinese society over several recent decades with significant policy implications The book will attract sociologists students and policymakers interested in social structure social transformation and middle income groups in China
