Discriminating Risk Guy Stuart, 2018-07-05 The U S home mortgage industry first formalized risk criteria in the 1920s and 1930s to determine which applicants should receive funds Over the past eighty years these formulae have become more sophisticated Guy Stuart demonstrates that the very concepts on which lenders base their decisions reflect a set of social and political values about who deserves what Stuart examines the fine line between licit choice and illicit discrimination arguing that lenders while eradicating blatantly discriminatory practices have ignored the racial and economic class biases that remain encoded in their decision processes He explains why African Americans and Latinos continue to be at a disadvantage in gaining access to loans discrimination he finds results from the interaction between the way lenders make decisions and the way they shape the social structure of the mortgage and housing markets Mortgage lenders Stuart contends are embedded in and shape a social context that can best be understood in terms of rules networks and the production of space Stuart s history of lenders risk criteria reveals that they were synthesized from rules of thumb cultural norms and untested theories In addition his interviews with real estate and lending professionals in the Chicago housing market show us how the criteria are implemented today Drawing on census and Home Mortgage Disclosure Act data for quantitative support Stuart concludes with concrete policy proposals that take into account the social structure in which lenders make decisions How We Became Our Data Colin Koopman, 2019-06-21 We are now acutely aware as if all of the sudden that data matters enormously to how we live How did information come to be so integral to what we can do How did we become people who effortlessly present our lives in social media profiles and who are meticulously recorded in state surveillance dossiers and online marketing databases What is the story behind data coming to matter so much to who we are In How We Became Our Data Colin Koopman excavates early moments of our rapidly accelerating data tracking technologies and their consequences for how we think of and express our selfhood today Koopman explores the emergence of mass scale record keeping systems like birth certificates and social security numbers as well as new data techniques for categorizing personality traits measuring intelligence and even racializing subjects This all culminates in what Koopman calls the informational person and the informational power we are now subject to The recent explosion of digital technologies that are turning us into a series of algorithmic data points is shown to have a deeper and more turbulent past than we commonly think Blending philosophy history political theory and media theory in conversation with thinkers like Michel Foucault Jürgen Habermas and Friedrich Kittler Koopman presents an illuminating perspective on how we have come to think of our personhood and how we can resist its erosion
