New anti-infective strategies for treatment of tularemia Max Maurin, 2014-11-21 Francisella tularensis the causative agent of tularemia is a paradigm among human pathogens This Gram negative bacterium has an intracellular lifestyle which probably reflects an adaptation to its natural animal and protozoa reservoirs This is one of the most infectious agents in humans and animals only a few bacteria are needed to induce a severe infection in both types of hosts The clinical presentation and severity of human tularemia varies according to the portal of entry of bacteria the bacterial inoculum the virulence of the infecting strain and the immune response of the host Although most infections occur after direct inoculation of bacteria through the skin through skin wounds or bites of arthropods pneumonia due to inhalation of infected aerosols is the most feared of the clinical forms of the disease particularly in the context of biological threat Two subspecies are responsible for tularemia subsp tularensis and subsp holarctica and several clades have been described for each which might be associated with changes in disease severity in humans Tularemia is also more severe in people with an impaired immune response No safe vaccine is currently available for prophylaxis of tularemia in humans On the other hand control of proliferation of F tularensis in wildlife is not feasible Thus only the anti infective agents are used for treatment and prophylaxis of human tularemia The standard options include aminoglycosides gentamicin tetracyclines eg doxycycline and fluoroquinolones eg ciprofloxacin The selection of acquired resistance to these antibiotics in F tularensis especially in the context of a biological threat may quickly limit the therapeutic options New prophylactic and therapeutic alternatives must be developed rapidly The present Research Topic focuses on potential new strategies for treatment of tularemia including the development and evaluation of new compounds having proper antibacterial activity reducing the virulence of F tularensis or enhancing the immune host response endocannabinoid system: a key modulator of emotions and cognition Patrizia Campolongo, Major Histocompatibility Complex (MHC) in Health and Disease Jerzy K. Kulski, Takashi Shiina, Johannes M. Dijkstra, 2020-01-15 The major histocompatibility complex MHC is a highly polymorphic and diverse multigene locus in all jawed vertebrate species that has an integral role in adaptive innate immune systems transplantation and infectious and autoimmune diseases The MHC supra locus in mammalian vertebrates is usually partitioned into three distinct regions known as classes I II and III which to varying extents can be found conserved in nonmammalian jawed vertebrates such as bony fish amphibians and bird lineages The MHC gene region is characterized particularly by the expression of class I and class II glycoproteins that bind peptides derived from intracellular or extracellular antigens to circulating T cells While this expressed antigenic specificity remains the predominant interest with respect to MHC function and polymorphism in a population a broader concept has emerged that examines the MHC as a multifunctional polymorphic controller that facilitates and regulates genome diversity with a much greater array of functions and effects than just MHC restricted antigen recognition This volume of 19 reprints presented by various experts and collected from the Special Issue of Cells on MHC in Health and Disease covers a broad range of topics on the genomic diversity of the MHC regulatory system in various vertebrate species including MHC class I II and III genes innate and adaptive immunity neurology transplantation haplotypes infectious and autoimmune diseases fecundity conservation allelic lineages and evolution Taken together these articles demonstrate the immense complexity and diversity of the MHC structure and function within and between different vertebrate species The use of large animal models to improve pre-clinical translational research Mark Gray,Abirami Kugadas,Stefano Guido,2023-03-30
