

Chapter 11

HEAT EXCHANGERS

Types of Heat Exchangers

11-1C Heat exchangers are classified according to the flow type: parallel flow, counter flow, crossflow, or shell-and-tube. In parallel flow, both hot and cold fluids enter the heat exchanger at the same end and exit at the other. In counter flow, the hot and cold fluids enter the heat exchanger at opposite ends and flow in opposite directions. In cross flow, the hot and cold fluids flow across each other in different directions.

11-2C In terms of construction type, heat exchangers are classified as compact, shell and tube, and regenerative heat exchangers. Compact heat exchangers are typically designed to obtain large heat transfer surface per unit volume. The major compact ones are compact heat exchangers (consisting of multiple channels) formed when plates are compressed together with separating ribs or tubes. Shell-and-tube heat exchangers consist of large number of tubes (passages for fluid) which are surrounded by shell. Regenerative heat exchangers transfer the alternate passages of the hot and cold fluid in series through the same flow area. In compact heat exchangers, the heat fluids usually undergo perpendicular to each other.

11-3C A heat exchanger is classified as heating exchanger if $T_2 > T_{2H}$ or $T_1 < T_{1C}$ where T_1 is the inlet of the heat exchanger, T_2 is the exit of the exchanger, which is called the warm stream. The same applies for cooling. Cold heat exchanger case is $T_2 < T_{2H}$ or $T_1 > T_{1C}$. The exchanger case is for shell-and-tube exchangers.

11-4C In counter flow heat exchangers, the hot and the cold fluids move in opposite directions. In cross flow heat exchangers, the hot and cold fluids are exposed to each other in perpendicular directions. In a cross flow heat exchanger, the two fluids enter from perpendicular to each other. This means flow is said to be cross flow when the two fluids enter the heat exchanger at different locations, splitting and combine to flows exiting in the same direction. Before the fluid is flow separation, the two streams are perpendicular, whereas after it said to be mixed.

11-5C In the shell-and-tube exchangers, both the fluids typically, placed in the shell or tube. The shell side fluid is flow around the tube in parallel, but sometimes it is arranged in series. However, the tubes, which connect the flow in shell, and are called connecting tubes or U-tube, transfer the opposite flow. On the other hand, both the fluids flow parallel and carry out heat transfer only.

11-6C Using the data given for a shell-and-tube heat exchanger, determine the heat transfer surface area and the rate of heat transfer. Then determine the effectiveness.

11-7C Using the data given, determine the heat transfer surface area and the rate of heat transfer. Then determine the effectiveness.
