Hemingway's Theaters of Masculinity Thomas Strychacz, 2003-11-11 In this provocative book Thomas Strychacz pursues an entirely new approach to the question of masculinity in Ernest Hemingway's work He begins with a close reading of Hemingway's famous story The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber and continues through the story cycle In Our Time the short story The Undefeated the novels The Sun Also Rises A Farewell to Arms For Whom the Bell Tolls and The Old Man and the Sea and the nonfiction books Death in the Afternoon and Green Hills of Africa Challenging the traditional wisdom that Hemingway fashions a quintessentially masculine style and promotes an ideal of stoic independent manhood Strychacz argues that Hemingway's fiction poses masculinity as a theatrical performance Masculinity emerges from a series of complex negotiations between male characters readers and cultural codes of manhood Hemingway's masculine style should be seen as deeply rhetorical inviting the audience to think of masculinity as a contention to be debated rather than a fact that demands acquiescence Drawing on feminism gender studies and the New Men's Studies this book casts brilliant interpretive light on Hemingway's artistry It contributes significantly to the larger cultural discussions about the nature of masculinity while offering an analysis and critique of masculinity in Hemingway's work that greatly extends recent scholarly debates about masculine modernism It raises the compelling question What is modernism if masculinity is exposed as more problematic and elusive than previously suspected

EXCERPT FROM THE BOOK The Green Hills of Africa is an autobiographical story documenting Hemingway's emotions, sites, and experiences as he trekked through the wilds of southeastern Africa in search of rare and challenging game. The opening scene describes Hemingway's quiet frustration and nonchalant attitude when a truck drives by and frightens off the kudu he is hunting. This singular scene shows the anticipation, failure, and dry emotions that are expressed throughout the book. Defeated, Hemingway returns to camp and on the way meets Kadinsky, who frightened the kudu. Kadinsky joins Hemingway's party and it seems that the two will get on quite well, sharing similar tastes in literature and opinion, but the more questions Kadinsky asks, the more he wears on Hemingway's nerves.
