Master Shots Vol 2 Shooting Great Dialogue Scenes:

Master Shots Christopher Kenworthy, 2015 This is the ChineseSimplified version Dialogue scenes are the most important moments in your film but most directors get them wrong If you block your scenes well you do more than capture the basic scene you echo the meaning emotion and drama of every moment That is never more important than with dialogue Whatever your budget there is an exciting way to capture dialogue It is a tragedy that so many directors are happy to open a scene with a moving master shot and then just settle into dull coverage for the dialogue You can do better than that and Master Shots Vol 2 gives you 100 ways to shoot dynamic dialogue Can integrated titles improve the viewing experience? Wendy Fox, 2018 Historically a dubbing country Germany is not well known for subtitled productions But while dubbing is predominant in Germany more and more German viewers prefer original and subtitled versions of their favourite shows and films Conventional subtitling however can be seen as a strong intrusion into the original image that can not only disrupt but also destroy the director's intended shot composition and focus points Long eye movements between focus points and subtitles decrease the viewer's information intake and especially German audiences who are often not used to subtitles seem to prefer to wait for the next subtitle instead of looking back up again Furthermore not only the placement but also the overall design of conventional subtitles can disturb the image composition for instance titles with a weak contrast inappropriate typeface or irritating colour system So should it not despite the translation process be possible to preserve both image and sound as far as possible Especially given today's numerous artistic and technical possibilities and the huge amount of work that goes into the visual aspects of a film taking into account not only special effects but also typefaces opening credits and text image compositions A further development of existing subtitling guidelines would not only express respect towards the original film version but also the translator's work The presented study shows how integrated titles can increase information intake while maintaining the intended image composition and focus points as well as the aesthetics of the shot compositions During a three stage experiment the specifically for this purpose created integrated titles in the documentary Joining the Dots by director Pablo Romero Fresco were analysed with the help of eye movement data from more than 45 participants Titles were placed based on the gaze behaviour of English native speakers and then rated by German viewers dependant on a German translation The results show that a reduction of the distance between intended focus points and titles allow the viewers more time to explore the image and connect the titles to the plot The integrated titles were rated as more aesthetically pleasing and reading durations were shorter than with conventional subtitles Based on the analysis of graphic design and filmmaking rules as well as conventional subtitling standards a first workflow and set of placement strategies for integrated titles were created in order to allow a more respectful handling of film material as well as the preservation of the original image composition and typographic film identity Master Shots Christopher Kenworthy, 2011 Building on the success of the bestselling Master Shots this volume goes much deeper revealing the great directors secrets toward aims that we strive to reach and delimited by our birth and death Nevertheless we can still experience fleeting moments during which we forget the past and the future as well as the very flow of time During these intense emotions we burst out laughing or crying or we scream with pleasure or we are mesmerized by a work of art or just by eyes staring at us Similarly when we watch a film the screening time has a well defined beginning and end and screening and diegetic time and their relations together with narrative and stylistic techniques determine a time within the time of our life with its own rules and exceptions Through the close analysis of Stanley Kubrick s Adrian Lyne s Michael Bay s and Quentin Tarantino s oeuvres this book discusses the overall dominating time of their films and the moments during which this ruling time is disrupted and we momentarily forget the run toward the diegetic future suspense or the past curiosity and surprise It is in these very moments as well as in our own lives that the prison of time through which the film is constructed and that is constructed by the film itself crumbles displaying our role as spectators our deepest relations with the film
