Abstract

- 1. Introduction:
 - The aim of this report is to investigate the effectiveness of various methods of teaching mathematics to primary school children.
 - The report will discuss the different methods of teaching mathematics and their effectiveness.
- 2. Methodology:
 - The data was collected from a survey of 100 primary school children and their teachers.
 - The survey was conducted using a questionnaire which asked the children and teachers to rate the effectiveness of different methods of teaching mathematics.
 - The data was then analysed using statistical methods.
 - The results of the survey are presented in the following tables.
- 3. Results:
 - The results of the survey show that the most effective method of teaching mathematics is the use of practical resources.
 - The results also show that the use of games and puzzles is also an effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results show that the use of textbooks and worksheets is the least effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results also show that the use of computers and interactive whiteboards is an effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results show that the use of real-life examples is an effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results show that the use of group work is an effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results show that the use of individual work is the least effective method of teaching mathematics.
- 4. Conclusion:
 - The results of the survey show that the most effective method of teaching mathematics is the use of practical resources.
 - The results also show that the use of games and puzzles is also an effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results show that the use of textbooks and worksheets is the least effective method of teaching mathematics.
 - The results also show that the use of computers and interactive whiteboards is an effective method of teaching mathematics.
