¹² To address the issue, we estimated the model for each country separately. The results are available from the author upon request.

As noted earlier, the 1990s witnessed a dramatic increase in the number of U.S. firms operating in foreign markets. This increase was driven by a number of factors, including the globalization of the economy, the need for firms to diversify their product lines, and the desire for firms to expand their market share. The increase in international trade and investment has led to a growing number of U.S. firms operating in foreign markets, and this trend is expected to continue in the future.
