Thomas, Angela Gutchess, 2020-05-28 Decades of research have demonstrated that normal aging is accompanied by cognitive change Much of this change has been conceptualized as a decline in function However age related changes are not universal and decrements in older adult performance may be moderated by experience genetics and environmental factors Cognitive aging research to date has also largely emphasized biological changes in the brain with less evaluation of the range of external contributors to behavioral manifestations of age related decrements in performance This handbook provides a comprehensive overview of cutting edge cognitive aging research through the lens of a life course perspective that takes into account both behavioral and neural changes Focusing on the fundamental principles that characterize a life course approach genetics early life experiences motivation emotion social contexts and lifestyle interventions this handbook is an essential resource for researchers in cognition aging and gerontology Annual Review of Gerontology and Geriatrics, Volume 3, 1982, 1982-01-15 The second volume in this long running series presents the usual critical and intensive review chapters divided into five sections but also addresses particular topics of special interest including drugs and their use and misuse among the aged the nonmedication orientation to treatment of various disorders the immune system and clinical procedures in the management of urinary incontinence As with all the volumes the contributors represent an international array of leading experts Aging and Human Longevity M.-F. Schulz-Aellen, 2012-12-06 The proportion of elderly people continues to increase in the western world nearly a quarter of the population will be over 65 years by the year 2050 Since aging is accompanied by an increase in diseases and by a deterioration in well being finding solutions to these social medical and psychological problems is necessarily a major goal for society Scientists and medical practitioners are therefore faced with the urgent task of increasing basic knowledge of the biological processes that cause aging More resources must be put into this research in order to achieve better understanding of the cellular mechanisms that underlie the differences in life span between species and to answer the difficult questions of why some individuals age more quickly than others and why some develop liver problems some have heart problems and others brain problems The results of such a wide program of research will provide important information about the causes of many life threatening and or debilitating diseases of old age it will help find ways to prevent some of the ailments that result from aging and it may well lead to discoveries enabling the prolongation of human life Gerontology and Geriatrics
