Country Size and Public Administration Marlene Jugl, 2022-07-07 Although countries differ tremendously in population size comparative public administration has not considered this context factor systematically This Element provides the most comprehensive theoretical and empirical account to date of the effects that country size has on the functioning of public administration It synthesizes existing literature and develops a theoretical framework that distinguishes the effects of small medium and large country size on administrative structures practices and public service performance Large states with larger administrations benefit from specialization but are prone to coordination problems whereas small states experience advantages and disadvantages linked to multifunctionalism and informal practices Midsize countries may achieve economies of scale while avoiding diseconomies of excessive size which potentially allows for highest performance Descriptive and causal statistical analyses of worldwide indicators and a qualitative comparison of three countries Luxembourg the Netherlands and Germany demonstrate the various ways in which size matters for public administrations around the world

Restraining Power through Institutions Alexandru V. Grigorescu, 2023-10-09 This book challenges the traditional view that meaningful analogies cannot be drawn between domestic and international politics Alexandru V Grigorescu shows that there are important parallels to be drawn across these two realms if political interactions among states over the past two centuries are compared to those within states going back about a thousand years He focuses specifically on the evolution of institutions that restrain concentrated power such as courts assemblies and bureaucracies Restraining Power through Institutions begins by developing a set of theoretical arguments about the emergence change and consolidation of institutional restraints on power These are primarily derived from literature focusing on domestic politics going back to events such as those surrounding the signing of the Magna Carta and the emergence and evolution of the Curia Regis in England or of the Estates General and Parlements in France It then assesses the relevance of such arguments for the evolution of numerous international institutions international courts such as the Permanent Court of Arbitration International Court of Justice and International Criminal Court international assemblies and parliaments such as the Assembly of the League of Nations UN General Assembly and European Parliament and international secretariats such as those of the Central Commission for the Navigation of the Rhine League of Nations UN and World Bank The similarities between developments in the domestic and international realms lead to a number of important conclusions about future expectations for international institutions and for world politics more broadly In particular the book argues that complementing the traditional focus on efforts to acquire power with the Lockean focus on restraining power offers a more complete depiction of international politics This novel perspective consequently shifts the focus from the interests and actions of a handful of powerful states to those of virtually all states and groups of states regardless of how powerful they are New Public Management in Africa Benon C.

Basheka, Lukamba-Muhiya. Tshombe, 2017-08-25 The administrative sciences have been dominated by a turn to managerial perspectives in the late 20th and early 21st centuries and in the spirit of this turn New Public Management or NPM promises to produce efficient responsible and client oriented public services The reforms carried out in the pursuit of New Public Management are often accompanied by great optimism and rapid enthusiastic steps toward implementation Even in highly developed industrial countries however these fundamental reforms often overlook the political and cultural contexts of the implementing country New Public Management in Africa Emerging Issues and Lessons provides much needed theoretical foundations for NPM reforms in the African context and reflects on the success of existing reforms in the development of several African states The individual contributions in this timely volume provide important analyses of academic discourse practical policy achievements and desiderata The book as a whole however provides a valuable impetus for public administration research in and on African states sharing findings on the results of reforms to date and adjustments required for these reforms to succeed For public administration researchers outside of Africa this book offers a review of New Public Management case studies that are unavailable or difficult to find elsewhere contributing much to the exchange between African and Western administration science research and demonstrating that African administrative research is well prepared to help resolve global challenges Shaping the World of Change ,2024-06-03 This book sets out the theme of a

Party Patronage and Party Government in European Democracies Petr Kopecký, Peter Mair, Maria Spirova, 2012-07-26 Party Patronage and Party Government in European Democracies brings together insights from the worlds of party politics and public administration in order to analyze the role of political parties in public appointments across contemporary Europe Based on an extensive new data gathered through expert interviews in fifteen European countries this book offers the first systematic comparative assessment of the scale of party patronage and its role in sustaining modern party governments Among the key findings are First patronage appointments tend to be increasingly dominated by the party in public office rather than being used or controlled by the party organization outside parliament Second rather than using appointments as rewards as used to be the case in more clientelistic systems in the past parties are now more likely to emphasize appointments that can help them to manage the infrastructure of government and the state In this way patronage becomes an organizational rather than an electoral resource Third patronage appointments are increasingly sourced from channels outside of the party thus helping to make parties look increasingly like network organizations primarily constituted by their leaders and their personal and political hinterlands Comparative Politics is a series for students teachers and researchers of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics Global in scope books in the series are characterised by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research For more information visit www.essex.ac.uk/ecpr The Comparative Politics series is edited by Professor David M Farrell School of Politics and International Relations University College Dublin Kenneth Carty Professor of Political Science University of British Columbia and Professor Dirk Berg Schlosser Institute of Political Science Philipps University Marburg

Citizen Participation in the Age of Contracting Anna A. Amirkhanyan, Kristina T. Lambright, 2017-11-28 Citizen Participation in the Age of Contracting is based on a simple premise in democracies power originates with citizens While citizen participation in government remains a central tenet of democracy public service delivery structures are considerably more complex today than they were fifty years ago Today governments contract with private organizations to deliver a wide array of services Yet we know very little about how citizens influence government decisions and policies in the hollow state Based on nearly 100 interviews with public and private managers our findings about the state of citizen participation in contract governance are somewhat disheartening Public and private organizations engaged citizens in a number of ways However most of their efforts failed to shift the power structure in communities and did not give citizens a chance to fundamentally shape local priorities and programs Instead elected officials and professional staff largely maintained control over significant policy and administrative decisions Widespread but narrow in their forms and impact the participation practices we uncovered did not live up to the ideals of democracy and self governance Citizen Participation in the Age of Contracting is suitable for those who study public administration as well as in other closely related fields such as nonprofit management and organizational behavior

Lockean Liberalism in International Relations Alexandru V. Grigorescu, Claudio J. Katz, 2024-04-04 This Element applies a new version of liberalism to international relations IR one that derives from the political theory of John Locke It begins with a survey of liberal IR theories showing that the main variants of this approach have all glossed over classical liberalism's core concern fear of the state's concentrated power and the imperative of establishing institutions to restrain its inevitable abuse The authors tease out from Locke's work its realist elements his emphasis on politics power and restraints on power the Lockean tripod They then show how this Lockean approach 1 complements existing liberal approaches and answers some of the existing critiques directed toward them 2 offers a broader analytical framework for several very different strands of IR literature and 3 has broad theoretical and practical implications for international relations
