

The Tragedy of Macbeth - Act IV

Macbeth

Malcolm

Donalbain

The Macbeths are disappointed again, just through Act 3 of Shakespeare's Macbeth. They're extremely angry, making sure that every ending point is pronounced in emotional effect. If the meeting tomorrow, whether it's decisive they are, something's happening tomorrow.

Macbeth's last sentence of this speech is just that: that just comes in a different way and back.

| Macbeth's Character                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Malcolm's Character                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
