Availability of Financial Soundness Indicators Mr.Graham L. Slack,2003-03-01 Because the wave of financial crises in recent years has spurred analysts and policymakers interest in monitoring the vulnerabilities of financial systems the need for supporting data has increased This paper presents survey results on the collection compilation and dissemination of data on a range of indicators of financial soundness in 100 countries The paper distinguishes between the collection of financial soundness indicators for policymakers and their dissemination to the general public It also explores the eagerness of national authorities to disseminate the information they collect and to what extent it relates to financial crisis experience

Macroprudential Indicators of Financial System Soundness Mr.Mahinder Singh Gill,Mr.Paul Louis Ceriel Hilbers,Mr.Alfredo Mario Leone,Mr.Owen Evens,2000-04-15 Following the severe financial crises of the 1990s identifying and assessing financial sector vulnerabilities has become a key priority of the international community The costly disruptions in global markets underscored the need to establish a set of monitorable variables for evaluating strengths and weaknesses in financial institutions and to alert authorities of impending problems These variables indicators of financial system health and stability known collectively as macroprudential indicators are the subject of this Occasional Paper by the Monetary and Exchange Affairs Department and the Statistics Department Macroprudential indicators take measures at both the level of aggregated financial institutions and at the macroeconomic level financial crises often occur when weaknesses are identified in both The authors provide a breakdown and explanations of these indicators and a review of the theoretical and empirical work done thus far Work at other international and multilateral institutions is included as well as the experiences of several national central banks and supervisory agencies This paper provides a valuable reference source of current knowledge about macroprudential indicators and issues related to their analysis identification measurement and possible dissemination

Financial Sector Surveillance and the IMF Carlo Gola,Francesco Spadafora,2009-11-01 The global financial crisis has magnified the role of Financial Sector Surveillance FSS in the Fund s activities This paper surveys the various steps and initiatives through which the Fund has increasingly deepened its involvement in FSS Overall this process can be characterized by a preliminary stage and two main phases The preliminary stage dates back to the 1980s and early 1990s and was mainly related to the Fund s research and technical assistance activities within the process of monetary and financial deregulation embraced by several member countries The first official phase of the Fund's involvement in FSS started in the aftermath of the Mexican crisis and relates to the international call to include financial sector issues among the core areas of Fund surveillance The second phase focuses on the objectives of bringing the coverage of financial sector issues up to par with the coverage of other traditional core areas of surveillance and of integrating financial analysis into the Fund's analytical macroeconomic framework By urging the Fund to give greater attention to its member countries financial systems the international community's response to the global crisis may mark the beginning of a new phase of FSS
