Infrastructure and Poverty in Sub-Saharan Africa - A Review Jörg Peters,2016 Africa's Infrastructure World Bank,2009-12-01 Sustainable infrastructure development is vital for Africa s prosperity And now is the time to begin the transformation This volume is the culmination of an unprecedented effort to document analyze and interpret the full extent of the challenge in developing Sub Saharan Africa s infrastructure sectors As a result it represents the most comprehensive reference currently available on infrastructure in the region The book covers the five main economic infrastructure sectors information and communication technology irrigation power transport and water and sanitation Africa s Infrastructure A Time for Transformation reflects the collaboration of a wide array of African regional institutions and development partners under the auspices of the Infrastructure Consortium for Africa It presents the findings of the Africa Infrastructure Country Diagnostic AICD a project launched following a commitment in 2005 by the international community after the G8 summit at Gleneagles Scotland to scale up financial support for infrastructure development in Africa The lack of reliable information in this area made it difficult to evaluate the success of past interventions prioritize current allocations and provide benchmarks for measuring future progress hence the need for the AICD Africa s infrastructure sectors lag well behind those of the rest of the world and the gap is widening Some of the main policy relevant findings highlighted in the book include the following infrastructure in the region is exceptionally expensive with tariffs being many times higher than those found elsewhere Inadequate and expensive infrastructure is retarding growth by 2 percentage points each year Solving the problem will cost over US 90 billion per year which is more than twice what is being spent in Africa today However money alone is not the answer Prudent policies wise management and sound maintenance can improve efficiency thereby stretching the infrastructure dollar There is the potential to recover an additional US 17 billion a year from within the existing infrastructure resource envelope simply by improving efficiency For example improved revenue collection and utility management could generate US 3.3 billion per year Regional power trade could reduce annual costs by US 2 billion And deregulating the trucking industry could reduce freight costs by one half So raising more funds without also tackling inefficiencies would be like pouring water into a leaking bucket Finally the power sector and fragile states represent particular challenges Even if every efficiency in every infrastructure sector could be captured a substantial funding gap of 31 billion a year would remain Nevertheless the African people and economies cannot wait any longer Now is the time to begin the transformation to sustainable development

Trade Expansion in Sub-Saharan Africa Piet Buys, Uwe Deichmann, David Wheeler, 2010 Recent research suggests that poor economic integration and isolation from regional and international markets have contributed significantly to poverty in Sub-Saharan Africa Poor transport infrastructure and border restrictions are major deterrents to trade expansion which would stimulate economic growth and poverty reduction Using spatial network analysis techniques and gravity trade model estimations this paper quantifies the economics of upgrading a primary road network that connects the major urban areas in the region The results indicate that continental network upgrading is worth serious consideration from an economic perspective Our simulations suggest that overland trade among Sub-Saharan African countries might expand by about 250 billion over 15 years with major direct and indirect benefits for the rural poor Financing the programme would require about 20 billion for initial upgrading and 1 billion annually for maintenance

Regional Economic Outlook, October 2005, Sub-Saharan Africa, Supplement International Monetary Fund. African Dept.,2005-11-10 This paper presents the economic outlook for Sub Saharan Africa for 2005 Against a background of an easing of demand for imports in advanced countries average real GDP growth is expected to decline slightly in 2005 from its strong performance in 2004 The slowdown in 2005 however is attributable primarily to lower growth in most of the oil producing countries following the exceptional increases in oil production capacity established during 2003 and 2004 especially in Nigeria Non oil producing countries are expecting average growth of about 4 5 percent similar to that observed in 2004 Infrastructure for Economic Development and Poverty Reduction in Africa ,2011 Evaluates the role of

Nwangwu,2025-08-20 This book examines the critical challenges and opportunities surrounding climate change and the energy transition in Africa While many Africans prioritize pressing concerns such as food scarcity economic development and unemployment the book argues that the continent remains particularly vulnerable to climate related impacts Erratic weather patterns and extreme events exacerbate existing issues including declining agricultural productivity infrastructure damage and political instability Despite these challenges the transition from fossil fuels to renewable energy presents significant economic opportunities for Africa The book emphasizes that embracing this shift can help African countries transform their economies and strengthen resilience against climate change It contends that the current international framework where Africa has largely anchored its demands around climate justice has yielded little tangible benefit for Africans Instead the book advocates for a shift in perspective rather than focusing solely on historical emissions from the Global North African nations should recognize the potential advantages of actively participating in the global energy economy By seizing the opportunities inherent in this transition African countries can reshape their economies and capitalize on emerging energy
