Active Living

Expectation/Big Idea	Level 1	Level 2	Level 3	Level 4
Active participation and fitness	Thomas is beginning to understand the importance of being physically active in his daily life. He displays behaviors that enhance his readiness and willingness to participate in a variety of activities (e.g. attentive listening, positive attitude, knowing what to do, asking for help). This was demonstrated during organized games.	At times, Thomas knows the importance of being physically active in his daily life. He describes different activities that can strengthen his heart and lungs (e.g. running, walking, etc.). In addition, he can state reasons for being physically active every day (e.g. to have fun, to improve health). This was evident during class discussion.	Thomas knows the importance of being physically active in his daily life. He describes different degrees of exertion using simple movement methods (e.g. feeling his chest for a faster heartbeat). In addition, he understands factors that contribute to his physical enjoyment (e.g. being outdoors, playing with friends, etc.).	Thomas clearly knows the importance of being physically active in his daily life. He diligently sets realistic personal, as well as, group fitness goals and works towards achieving them. In addition, he suggests to participate fully in activities that are fun and healthful.
Safety	With assistance, Thomas is responsible for his own safety and the safety of others. During our games, he knows how to remain in space to avoid collisions.	Thomas sometimes is responsible for his own safety and the safety of others. During our games, he knows how to remain in space to avoid collisions.	Thomas is responsible for his own safety and the safety of others. During our games, he knows how to remain in space to avoid collisions and he can protect himself from injury (e.g. wearing his goggles that fit properly, reducing the intensity of an activity if there is an oncoming obstacle, etc.).	Thomas is always responsible for his own safety and that of others. During our games, he promotes a safe environment by following routines, listening attentively, cooperating and communicating with others about potential safety risks.
