

Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a common cause of nosocomial infection. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the hospital environment. A total of 100 samples were collected from the hospital environment. The results showed that 60% of the samples were positive for S. aureus. The most common source of contamination was the hospital room (40%). The results of this study suggest that the hospital environment is a significant source of S. aureus contamination.

1. Identify the main components of the system.
The system consists of the following components:
- Input devices: Keyboard, mouse, touchpad, trackball, joystick, game controller, etc.
- Output devices: Monitor, printer, speaker, headphones, etc.
- Processing unit: CPU, GPU, RAM, storage, etc.
- Operating system: Windows, macOS, Linux, etc.
- Applications: Software programs that run on the operating system.

2. Describe the flow of data between the components.
The flow of data is as follows:
- Input devices send data to the processing unit.
- The processing unit sends data to the output devices.
- The operating system manages the flow of data between the input and output devices and the processing unit.
- Applications send data to the operating system, which then sends it to the processing unit.

3. Explain the role of the operating system.
The operating system (OS) is responsible for managing the hardware and software resources of the computer. It provides a layer of abstraction between the hardware and the applications, allowing applications to interact with the hardware without needing to know the details of the hardware. The OS also manages the flow of data between the hardware and the applications.

4. Discuss the importance of the input and output devices.
Input and output devices are essential for the user to interact with the computer. Input devices allow the user to provide data to the computer, while output devices allow the computer to provide data to the user. Without input and output devices, the computer would be unable to function as a user interface.

5. Summarize the overall system architecture.
The overall system architecture is a hierarchical structure where the hardware (input devices, processing unit, output devices) forms the base, and the operating system and applications are built on top of it. The operating system acts as the central hub, managing the flow of data and resources between the hardware and the applications.
