Measuring a Nation's Production and Income

Chapter Summary

Chapter 5 is the first chapter in macroeconomics and introduces many of the basic terms and concepts required to study the economy as a whole. Here are the main points of the chapter:

- The circular flow diagram shows how the production of goods and services generates income for households and how households purchase goods and services by firms. The expanded circular flow diagram includes government and the foreign sector.
- Gross domestic product (GDP) is the market value of all final goods and services produced in a given year.
- GDP consists of four components: consumption, investment, government purchases, and net exports. The GDP deflator is an index that measures how the prices of goods and services included in GDP change over time.
