Modelling Macroeconomic Adjustment with Growth in Developing Economies Sushanta K. Mallick, 2018-08-13 First published in 1999 this influential volume explores Macroeconomic Adjustment with a particular focus on India Its inspiration originated from the introduction of stabilisation and structural adjustment policies in India in 1991 Mallick examines the application of this policy package by the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank to Developing Economies First looking at the initial conditions and generators of imbalances the appropriate policy framework for India s initial conditions and structural characteristics is considered While the effectiveness of the IMF had been strongly criticised Mallick explains how it could be used more effectively He argues that the programs applied are often contradictory and using India as an example examines the effects of policy reform on its trade sector the repercussions on the direct economy and the costs associated with such policies in restoring stability and future economic growth with particular support for the Vector Autoregression VAR framework Mallick forwards a new structural model for policy purposes evaluated for overall performance and optimal control rigidities in agriculture They also feature dualistic markets a large informal sector rapid population growth a vulnerable export sector and chronic dependence on a volatile global finance The Macroeconomics of Developing Countries uses these examples to analyse the impact of stabilization and adjustment policies on growth inequality and poverty Despite the launch of the Sustainable Development Goals there is little consensus on how macroeconomic policies can be consistent with these objectives The Macroeconomics of Developing Countries demonstrates that a critical application of standard models to developing countries can generate erroneous results and induce the adoption of incorrect policy In order to address this it discusses the key structural differences between advanced and developing countries in order to justify the construction of alternative models Modeling the World Economic Outlook At the IMF Mr. James M. Boughton, 1997-04-01 The World Economic Outlook WEO exercise at the IMF evolved during the 1980s partly in response to demands by policymakers in national finance ministries for objective and internationally comparable projections and policy scenarios The exercise had begun as a staff initiative encouraged by the Managing Director Johannes Witteveen Gradually the Executive Board the Interim Committee the Group of Seven and others came to view the discussion of the WEO documents as an important element in their efforts to keep abreast of world economic developments and prospects Direct and indirect feedback from those discussions informed the staff as to how the exercise should be improved Driven by this policy relevance the WEO evolved from a decentralized project that was only haphazardly model based into a more rigorous and coordinated exercise

Staff Studies for the World Economic Outlook, December 1993 International Monetary Fund, 1994-01-15 This paper focuses on the private nonfinancial sectors of the affected economies financial liberalization provided households and businesses with greater access to credit markets This contributed to the long period of expansion during the 1980s Partly as a result of major changes to the financial systems several industrial countries had a boom in asset markets associated with a period of asset accumulation an unprecedented buildup of debt a sharp increase in relative asset prices and related increases in household wealth The expansion in household financial activity in the United Kingdom during the 1980s was paralleled by a sizable boom in investment spending and an increase in corporate debt The structure of balance sheets was also affected by mergers and acquisitions that led to a further expansion in corporate debt New types of bank loans and accounts have prevented even greater disintermediation but have also reduced net interest margins because more deposits now earn market related rates of return A Model for Financial Programming Mr. Jan Giehm Mikkelsen, 1998-06-01 This paper presents a simple simulation model that enables the formulation of a consistent growth oriented medium term adjustment program The applied version is available in Excel using data for El Salvador and can be used directly as a financial programming tool that provides a range of standard IMF performance criteria together with a complete set of consistent accounts for the real monetary public and external sectors of the economy Medium and long term growth considerations are incorporated through a neoclassical production function at the same time as monetary and fiscal policies are adjusted to Programs International Monetary Fund,1988-07-18 This paper suggests a conceptual framework that can serve as a basis for the design of growth oriented adjustment programs The two building blocks of the model are the well known monetary approach to the balance of payments and a variant of the open economy neoclassical growth model The integrated model combines growth inflation and the balance of payments and links these objectives to government policies and the availability of foreign financing The principal advantage of the proposed framework is its simplicity which enables it to be applied relatively easily to a variety of developing countries Labor Market Representation in Quantitative Macroeconomic Models for Developing Countries Mr.Jean Le Dem,Mr.Vincent Bodart,1995-08-01 This paper presents a quantitative macroeconomic model that accounts for key features of the labor market in developing countries Primarily inspired by C te d Ivoire the model contrasts a formal urban sector
