THIS IS GUIDED READING, GRADES 3-6

Douglas Fisher, Nancy Frey, Diane Lapp, and Kelly Johnson

INTRODUCTION / KEY CONCEPTS

PICTURE THIS:

A teacher and five fourth graders are sitting at a kidney-shaped table. All are reading silently. After a minute, the teacher taps one child's shoulder, who whisper reads at whatever point he is at in the text. The other four students don't pay any attention to him and continue silent reading. The teacher continues to listen in, tapping students' shoulders, checking for fluent reading. After several minutes, the five students are ready to talk about this section of the chapter book they are reading. The teacher guides the students by asking, "Is the author trying to persuade, inform, or entertain? How do you know? What language does the author use to tell you that?" Students continue to discuss the text with guidance from the teacher's text-dependent questions. This is guided reading!

WHAT IS IT?

Guided reading is small-group reading instruction usually involving three to five students grouped homogeneously based on their instructional needs or reading behaviors. Guided reading groups usually last about 20 to 30 minutes per group. Lessons in the upper grades should focus on expanding comprehension skills but may also include practice with multisyllable words, expanding word families while talking about derivational affixes (prefixes and suffixes) like pre or ness or inflectional endings like s or ed or focus on related content words. The intent is to help readers internalize strategies to enable their growing independence when reading increasingly complex texts. If needed, these lessons can also focus on foundational skills such as advanced phonemic awareness, phonics, and fluency.
