Errol Hill, 1992 A distinguished scholar here offers a thorough lively account of the Jamaican stage arguably the most prominent theatre of its kind in the British colonies through 1900 Errol Hill discusses the struggle to maintain viable playhouses the fortunes of visiting professional troupes and the emergence of an indigenous theatre He documents the plays written and produced through the end of the nineteenth century presenting them against the background of a society emerging in the 1830s from a slave holding system He also explores the rituals festivals and other forms of entertainment enjoyed by the broad underclass of Jamaicans most of whom were slaves or slave descendants and who today number over 90 percent of the island's population. By examining the record of theatrical production on the one hand and the variety of indigenous performance on the other Hill shows how a synthesis of native and foreign elements has occurred. He calls particular attention to the use of the Creole language, new performance patterns and the integration of music, dance, mime and masking. In the Epilogue he extends his discussion to the anglophone Caribbean which has become politically independent of Britain.

My journey has been made embracing the values I hold dear as well as the lessons of wisdom gained from the people and experiences that have impacted greatly on my life. Values such as a strong family ethos embedded by my parents in me and my siblings as well as the connections of our family relationship have been central throughout my journey. I am fortunate to be able to feature some amazing and solid Jamaican Fine Artists who have been such a bright light on my journey and who have given me abundant support along the way. Amazing human beings like my apprentice master Sir Robert Bryan. Of course I cannot overstate the importance of my wife and children to my journey. They have been a source of strong support and encouragement not to mention a tremendous motivation for me to do the things I do. This book allowed me to revisit some inspiring moments in my existence. I have been blessed to have met some interesting human beings over my journey. I celebrate the fact that I have been able to display my merchandise and art work at five Summer Olympics, one Winter Olympics game, one Football World Cup Final involving Jamaica's Reggae Boys. Also I have exhibited my works of art in many parts of the world alongside the Trafalgar members. Above all this book honours the importance of family values, self-determination, inspiration, self-belief and collaboration with one another.
