Summary of Student Reading, Culture, and Religion 1820-1900

This chapter discusses the cultural and religious changes that took place in the United States during the 1820s and 1830s. It covers the rise of the Second Great Awakening, the growth of the temperance movement, and the development of the abolitionist movement.

1. Religion: The Second Great Awakening, 1820-1840

Section	Text	Notes
The Second Great Awakening was a religious revival movement that took place in the United States during the 1820s and 1830s. It was characterized by a renewed emphasis on personal piety and a focus on the individual's relationship with God. The movement was led by preachers such as Charles Finney, who emphasized the importance of the individual's choice to accept or reject God's offer of salvation. This led to a surge in church membership and the growth of new religious denominations. The Second Great Awakening also led to the development of the temperance movement, which sought to eliminate the consumption of alcohol. This movement was led by women and was one of the first major social reform movements in the United States. The Second Great Awakening also led to the development of the abolitionist movement, which sought to end slavery. This movement was led by men and women and was one of the most important social reform movements in the United States.	The Second Great Awakening was a religious revival movement that took place in the United States during the 1820s and 1830s.
