Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity Institute of Medicine,Food and Nutrition Board,Committee on Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity,2007-02-22 The remarkable increase in the prevalence of obesity among children and youth in the United States over a relatively short timespan represents one of the defining public health challenges of the 21st century The country is beginning to recognize childhood obesity as a major public health epidemic that will incur substantial costs to the nation However the current level of investment by the public and private sectors still does not match the extent of the problem There is a substantial underinvestment of resources to adequately address the scope of this obesity crisis At this early phase in addressing the epidemic actions have begun on a number of levels to improve the dietary patterns and to increase the physical activity levels of young people Schools corporations youth related organizations families communities foundations and government agencies are working to implement a variety of policy changes new programs and other interventions These efforts however generally remain fragmented and small in scale Moreover the lack of systematic monitoring and evaluation of interventions have hindered the development of an evidence base to identify apply and disseminate lessons learned and to support promising efforts to prevent childhood obesity Progress in Preventing Childhood Obesity How Do We Measure Up examines the progress made by obesity prevention initiatives in the United States from 2004 to 2006 This book emphasizes a call to action for key stakeholders and sectors to commit to and demonstrate leadership in childhood obesity prevention evaluates all policies and programs monitors their progress and encourages stakeholders to widely disseminate promising practices This book will be of interest to federal state and local government agencies educators and schools public health and health care professionals private sector companies and industry trade groups media parents and those involved in implementing community based programs and consumer advocacy

Improving household consumption and expenditure surveys' food consumption metrics Fiedler, John L.,Mwangi, Dena M.,2016-11-18 As the nature of global malnutrition changes there is a growing need and increasing urgency for more and better information about food consumption and dietary patterns The past two decades have seen a dramatic increase in the number availability and analysis of the food consumption data collected in a variety of multipurpose household surveys referred to collectively as household consumption and expenditure surveys HCESs These surveys are heterogeneous and their quality varies substantially by country Still they share some common shortcomings in their measurement of food consumption nutrient intakes and nutrition status that undermine their relevance and reliability for purposes of designing and implementing food policies and programs This review crafts a strategic approach to the unfinished global agenda of improving HCESs collection of food consumption data Starting with the priority studies recommended by a 100 country HCES review Smith Dupriez and Troubat 2014 it focuses on a strategic subset of those studies that deal most directly and exclusively with the measurement of food and that are of fundamental importance to all HCES stakeholders in low and middle income countries Drawing from the literature this study provides a more detailed more circumspect justification as to why these particular studies are needed while identifying key hypotheses explaining why these studies are of growing urgency and demonstrating why now is a propitious time for undertaking them The review also identifies important study design considerations while pointing out potential challenges to successful implementation stemming from technical capacity economic administrative and political considerations Six key studies are rank ordered from a global perspective as follows taking into account 1 the likely shared consensus that a topic is an important source of measurement error in estimating consumption 2 the perceived urgency of the need for addressing a particular source of measurement error 3 the perceived likelihood of success that is that the efforts will improve the accuracy of measurement 4 whether or not the study entails modifying the questionnaire 5 the ease with which a study may begin and 6 the extent to which the study is independent of necessary negotiations with existing HCES stakeholders because of the types of changes it is likely to entail in either the questionnaire or the way the data have traditionally been processed
