true science” and cost expenditures on law enforcement. The independent committee acknowledged that adjustments and improvements can be made to benefit all citizens, but does not see the need for systemic changes to the criminal justice system.

Many states, localities, and law enforcement agencies are adopting the proposed changes in the majority report. Across the country, eyewitness identification procedures are evolving in order to fairly prosecute the guilty and not implicate the innocent.

State Senator Stewart Greenwald recently introduced two bills to implement the committee’s proposals. Senate Bill 1336, would create a Committee on Conviction Integrity. This committee would look at any proven exonerated case to determine what factors led to the wrongful conviction, and if changes to Pennsylvania’s criminal justice system could prevent future injustices.

The other bill, Senate Bill 1337, calls for needed improvements to methods used by law enforcement. Many of these improvements mirror those in the report from the Pennsylvania Advisory Committee on Wrongful Convictions.

When an innocent person is convicted of a crime he did not commit, we are all affected: the wrongfully convicted individual usually spends years in prison, the victim gets no closure, and the public must deal with other criminal acts from a true perpetrator who escaped justice.

Convicting innocent people is not a new phenomenon in our society, but with efforts like these, it need not be a permanent reality.

Michael Robert Blumenthal is the Legal Director of the Pennsylvania Innocence Project. For more information about wrongful convictions, go to:

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM THE PENNSYLVANIA ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON WRONGFUL CONVICTIONS

- A law requiring lineups and photo arrays to be conducted by someone who does not know who investigators suspect
- A law requiring the electronic recording of police interrogations and confessions
- State, rather than county, funding of defense services for the indigent, with adequate compensation for attorneys
- Electronic recording of statements made to law enforcement by defendants
- Requirement of a hearing, in capital cases before admitting testimony from an informant that is incriminated by the accused
- Extension of the length of time to petition for post-conviction relief (the “60 Day Rule”) to one year
- A law requiring the accreditation of forensic laboratories used in evidence collection
- A statutorily created forensic advisory board
- A law requiring the state to pay damages to those wrongfully imprisoned
- A statute enabling automatic expungement of the criminal history record for those found eligible
