The Social Psychology of English as a Global Language Robert M. McKenzie, 2010-08-18 This ground breaking work is a detailed account of an innovative and in depth study of the attitudes of in excess of 500 Japanese learners towards a number of standard and non standard as well as native and non native varieties of English speech The research conducted refines the investigation of learner attitudes by employing a range of pioneering techniques of attitude measurement These methods are largely incorporated from the strong traditions that exist in the fields of social psychology and second language acquisition and utilize both direct and indirect techniques of attitude measurement

The author locates the findings in the context of the wealth of literature on native speaker evaluations of languages and language varieties. The study is unique in that the results provide clear evidence of both attitude change and high levels of linguistic awareness among the informants of social and geographical diversity within the English language. These findings are analyzed in detail in relation to the global spread of English as well as in terms of the pedagogical implications for the choice of linguistic model employed in English language classrooms both inside and outside Japan. The issues examined are of particular interest to educators, researchers and students in the fields of applied linguistics, TESOL, second language acquisition, social psychology of language and sociolinguistics. The pedagogical and language policy implications of the findings obtained make essential reading for those with a specific focus on the role of the English language and English language teaching both in Japan and beyond.

Metalinguage and Identity David Evans, Manel Herat, 2025-09-18. How does language attain to rear view reflection and then timeless analysis? How does language garner its conceptualisation in order to do this? This book is an exploration of the process in which everyday narrative language can become reflective and then analytical. Narrative language is viewed as a way of becoming within the flow of time and therefore life. Evans and Herat show that there are levels in language that correspond with conceptual structures existing in the mind and in wider society which shape the formation of a metalanguage. They explore how metaphor is an important creative tool in raising language to a more conceptual level in the constitution of a metalanguage. The book considers the development of different strands of metalanguage for example mind based logic, physically based metaphor and universal grammar to provide a fuller account of language and identity by challenging sweeping existential accounts of language. By studying the formation and application of metalanguage the authors show it can help develop a more questioning dialogic critical pedagogy in education to accustom students to develop critical awareness.

Language, Identity and Contemporary Society Rajesh Kumar, Om Prakash, 2018-11-30. This book explores the instrumentality of language in constructing identity in contemporary society. The processes of globalization, hyper mobility, rapid urbanization and the increasing desire of local populations to be linked to the global community have created a pressing need to reconfigure identity in this new world order. Following the digital revolution, both traditional and new media are dissolving linguistic boundaries. The centrality of language in organizing communities and groups cannot be overstated; our social order is developed alongside our linguistic allegiance, shared narratives, collective memories and common social history. Keeping in mind the fluidity of identity, the book brings together fourteen chapters providing cultural and social perspectives. The ideas reflected here draw on a range of disciplines such as psychology, sociology, anthropology, cultural studies, the politics of language and linguistic identity.
